the variety of land questions facing africa and the divergent strategies proposed to resolve them continue to evoke debates increasingly in response to the enduring problems of land tenure there are land movements of all shapes and orientations some reformist and others quite revolutionary in their agenda however revolutionary land movements have tended to ignore the land tenure interests of women pastoralists youth and indigenous people several of these longstanding and emerging issues in land tenure include the role of the state in land tenure reforms urban land questions the nature of land struggles and improvements and the impact of land tenure developments on particular social groups and countries an overarching concern is the extent to which land rights are being commodified through the conversion of land held under customary tenure systems into marketised systems the consequences of this include growing land concentration land tenure insecurities diminishing access to land by various sections of society including the poor women and less dominant ethno religious groups this volume brings together different studies on africa s land questions exploring emerging land issues on the continent in terms of the wider questions of development citizenship and democratisation the chapters discuss the land question through a variety of themes some focus on the agrarian aspects of the land questions while others elucidate the urban dimensions of the land question what will the final state of the redeemed look like throughout the history of the church conceptions of the final state have tended to minimize the promise of the new heavens and new earth in contrast to the historical dominance of spiritual heavenly non temporal conceptions of the final state the last two decades have witnessed a rise in conceptions that include the redemption of material earthly and temporal reality these new creation conceptions have included proposals regarding the fulfillment of old testament land promises in new creation eschatology and the land steven l james argues that in recent new creation conceptions of the final state there is a logical inconsistency between the use of old testament texts to inform a renewed earth and the exclusion of the territory of israel from that renewed earth by examining a select group of new creationists james shows that the exclusion of the territorial restoration of israel in a new creation conception fails to appreciate the role of the particular territory in old testament prophetic texts and results in an inconsistent new creationism this publication has tried to indicate how the district idea works out as it moves from theory to practice from paper to the land many of the other districts show as much progress as is here revealed in the two examples when a considerable number of the recently organized districts can get into action in full stride we shall be immeasurably nearer the day when the forces of repair strike a balance with the forces of destruction how do societies negotiate the apparently competing agendas of environmental protection and social justice why do some countries perform much better than others on this front democracy in the woods addresses these question by examining land rights conflicts and the fate of forest dependent peasants in the context of the different forest property regimes in india tanzania and mexico these three countries are prominent in the scholarship and policy debates about national forest policies and land conflicts associated with international support for nature conservation this unique comparative study of national forestland regimes challenges the received wisdom that redistributive policies necessarily undermine the goals of environmental protection it shows instead that the form that national environmental protection efforts take either inclusive as in Mexico or exclusive as in Tanzania and for the most part in India depends on whether dominant political parties are compelled to create structures of political intermediation that channel peasant demands for forest and land rights into the policy process. This book offers three different tests of this theory of political origins of forestland regimes: first, it explains why it took the Indian political elites nearly sixty years to introduce meaningful reforms of the colonial era forestland regimes; second, it successfully explains the rather counterintuitive local outcomes of the programs for formalization of land rights in India, Tanzania, and Mexico; third, it provides a coherent explanation of why each of these three countries proposes a significantly different distribution of the benefits of forest-based climate change mitigation programs being developed under the auspices of the United Nations. In its political analysis of the control over and the use of nature, this book opens up new avenues for reflecting on how legacies of the past and international interventions interject into domestic political processes to produce specific configurations of environmental protection and social justice. Democracy in the woods offers a theoretically rigorous argument about why and in what specific ways politics determine the prospects of a socially just and environmentally secure world included in the Studies in Comparative Energy and Environmental Politics series.
