a dark and witty story of environmental collapse and runaway capitalism from the booker listed author of the teleportation accident the near future tens of thousands of species are going extinct every year and a whole industry has sprung up around their extinctions to help us preserve the remnants or perhaps just assuage our guilt for instance the biobanks secure archives of dna samples from which lost organisms might someday be resurrected but then one day it s all gone a mysterious cyber attack hits every biobank simultaneously wiping out the last traces of the perished species now we re never getting them back karin resaint and mark halyard are concerned with one species in particular the venomous lumpsucker a small ugly bottom feeder that happens to be the most intelligent fish on the planet resaint is an animal cognition scientist consumed with existential grief over what humans have done to nature halyard is an exec from the extinction industry complicit in the mining operation that destroyed the lumpsucker's last known habitat across the dystopian landscapes of the 2030s a nature reserve full of toxic waste a floating city on the ocean the hinterlands of a totalitarian state resaint and halyard hunt for a surviving lumpsucker and the further they go the deeper they're drawn into the mystery of the attack on the biobanks who was really behind it and why would anyone do such a thing virtuosic and profound witty and despairing venomous lumpsucker is ned beaman at his very best the story this book reveals has never been told before everyone knows about the bloomsbury group and their influence on art and style on literature life and manners even on psychology and economics but hitherto no one suspected that they have an equally profound influence on english theatre especially on productions of shakespeare most especially on the foundation of the rsc new research now traces the connections from William Poel and the Elizabethan Stage Society in the late nineteenth century to the foundation of the Marlowe Dramatic Society in Cambridge in 1907, Rupert Brooke is an early and active member and his friendships with Virginia Woolf and Lytton Strachey link the new society to Bloomsbury. The link is developed after the first world war by another friend of Woolf and Strachey and legendary don of King's College, George David Rylands, who directs Marlowe Society productions from 1929 to 1966. It is yet another member of Bloomsbury and even more legendary don at King's, Maynard Keynes, who builds the Cambridge Arts Theatre in 1936, managed by Rylands, where the Marlowe Society has performed ever since. This is the theatre that Peter Hall haunts as a schoolboy and acts in as a student in productions of Shakespeare directed by Rylands and King's College. Again, John Barton in 1959 leaves King's to join Peter Hall at the foundation of the RSC. From the same nursery of talent come Trevor Nunn, Ian McKellen, Derek Jacobi and many others. The so-called Cambridge Mafia. The continuity is so remarkable that in the perspective of this history one might almost call them the Bloomsbury group in disguise.
