a debate on the theory of intellectual property the boredom is a ubiquitous feature of modern life endured by everyone it is both cause and effect of modernity and of situations spaces and surroundings as such this book argues boredom shares an intimate relationship with architecture one that has been seldom explored in architectural history and theory boredom architecture and spatial experience investigates that relationship showing how an understanding of boredom affords us a new way of looking at and understanding the modern experience it reconstructs a series of episodes in architectural history from the 19th century to the present to survey how boredom became a normalized component of the everyday how it infiltrated into the production and reception of architecture and how it serves to diagnose moments of crisis in the continuous transformations of the built environment erudite and innovative the work moves deftly from architectural theory and philosophy to literature and psychology to make its case combining archival material scholarly sources and illuminating excerpts from conversations with practitioners and thinkers including charles jencks rem koolhaas sylvia lavin and jorge silvetti it reveals the complexity and importance of boredom in architecture unlike some other reproductions of classic texts 1 we have not used ocr optical character recognition as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos 2 in books where there are images such as portraits maps sketches etc we have endeavoured to keep the quality of these images so they represent accurately the original artefact although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy
