2 Compound-Complex Sentence

Because the cat sat on the rug, the dog barked; however, the bird continued to sing. Notice the increasing complexity. Compound-complex sentences combine elements of both compound and complex sentences, creating intricate yet coherent structures. The key is to use them sparingly and ensure clarity. Overusing them can lead to confusing and

3 Working with Participle and Gerund Phrases Participles Verb forms acting as adjectives eg running water broken vase They add descriptive detail Example The running water calmed her nerves The participle running modifies water Gerunds Verb forms acting as nouns eg swimming is fun I enjoy reading They often end in ing Example Reading is my favorite hobby Reading acts as the subject of the sentence

4 Utilizing Appositives and Absolute Phrases Appositives Phrases that rename or explain a noun They are set off by commas Example My dog a fluffy golden retriever loves to play fetch a fluffy golden retriever renames My dog Absolute Phrases Phrases that modify the entire sentence adding descriptive detail They are grammatically independent Example The sun beating down on us we decided to take a break The sun beating down on us modifies the entire sentence adding context

3 5 Mastering Advanced Punctuation Colons introduce explanations lists or quotations Semicolons join two independent clauses that are closely related Dashes indicate a break in thought or emphasize a point Parentheses enclose additional information or explanations

6 Achieving Parallelism Parallelism means using the same grammatical structure for items in a list or series This improves clarity and readability Incorrect She enjoys swimming to hike and dancing Correct She enjoys swimming hiking and dancing All verbs are in the gerund form
