the basis of arnold s high reputation as literary critic for those engaged in a detailed study of this literary form excerpt from essays in criticism realising this somewhat elementary truth the criticism of the future will study before it teaches and will take little for granted since its fundamental object is constructive it will feel the necessity of ascertaining beyond the shadow of a doubt that its foundation is secure and will recognise that we are yet children in our apprehension of spiritual truth in a new and truer sense of the word it will be inductive on the grand scale and each new critical revelation of its masters will serve as an additional contribution to the body of our spiritual insight this is a selection of essays by one of the most distinguished of modern literary critics I.C. Knights published as a companion volume to the selection of professor Knights' Shakespearean essays which appeared in 1979 the essays span almost four decades of critical work on authors as diverse as Marlowe, George Herbert, Clarendon and Henry James at the centre of each essay is an attempt to elicit some essential quality in the author or authors discussed although each can be read as an isolated critical essay the different pieces are linked by a pervasive interest in the conditions social or personal out of which particular works emerged and in the way in which major works of the imagination are renewed as they are re-interpreted in successive generations throughout the underlying assumption is that literary criticism needs to be pure the result of direct exposure to particular works but that it cannot remain purely literary if only because the meaning of literature includes its effects on the lives and conduct of individual human beings
