in this remarkable blend of memoir and criticism james wood noted contributor to the new yorker has written a master class on the connections between fiction and life he argues that of all the arts fiction has a unique ability to describe the shape of our lives and to rescue the texture of those lives from death and historical oblivion the act of reading is understood here as the most sacred and personal of activities and there are brilliant discussions of individual works among others chekhov s story the kiss w g sebald s the emigrants and penelope fitzgerald s the blue flower wood reveals his own intimate relationship with the written word we see the development of a provincial boy growing up in a charged christian environment the secret joy of his childhood reading the links he makes between reading and blasphemy or between literature and music the final section discusses fiction in the context of exile and homelessness the nearest thing to lifeÊis not simply a brief tightly argued book by a man commonly regarded as our finest living critic it is also an exhilarating personal account that reflects on and embodies the fruitful conspiracy between reader and writer and critic and asks us to reconsider everything that is at stake when we read and write fiction

this book analyzes the impact of the u s supreme court rulings deeming juvenile life without parole lwop sentences to be cruel and unusual punishment these court decisions brought about controversy and resistance in the criminal justice field while at the same time providing hope for those 2 300 people who never thought they had a chance to experience life as an adult outside prison by looking in depth at the lives of some of the individuals serving life terms and understanding both the prosecutors who oppose review and resentencing of juvenile lifers and those who are sincerely following the supreme court s guidelines this book provides a comprehensive understanding of the issues as well as the people involved in the sentencing and potential resentencing of juveniles to life without the possibility of parole the authors provide unique perceptive and straightforward profiles on some of the prisoners who were ultimately sentenced to lwop after being involved in criminal offenses committed before their 18th birthdays the book poignantly features the experiences of young people who did not commit a murder yet were still sentenced to life terms but also delves into the perspectives of the families of victims of juvenile offenders prosecutors on both sides of the issue psychologists who have interviewed many of the juvenile lifers and advocates for change in the way juveniles are treated by the criminal justice system the decisions in miller v alabama and montgomery v louisiana clearly demonstrated that the court s view of juveniles evolved over decades to reflect advances in our understanding of the unique characteristics of youth and their involvement in juvenile crimes this book takes the position that the sentence of life without the possibility of parole for youth is wasteful of both human lives and scarce public resources the authors write about the human concerns on both sides of the question and ultimately allow readers to make their own decisions about how society should best handle juvenile offenders this engaging ethnographic treatment will appeal to students and scholars of criminology corrections juvenile justice and delinquency practitioners working in social policy and all those interested in a criminal justice system capable of positive outcomes for involved youth
