both our view of seneca's philosophical thought and our approach to the ancient consolatory genre have radically changed since the latest commentary on the consolatio ad marciam was written in 1981 the aim of this work is to offer a new book length commentary on the earliest of seneca's extant writings along with a revision of the latin text and a reassessment of seneca's intellectual program strategies and context a crucial document to penetrate seneca's discourse on the self in its embryonic stages the ad marciam is here taken seriously as an engaging attempt to direct the persuasive power of literary models and rhetorical devices toward the fundamentally moral project of healing marcia's grief and correcting her cognitive distortions through close reading of the latin text this commentary shows that seneca invariably adapts different traditions and voices from greek consolations to plato's dialogues from the roman discourse of gender and exemplarity to epic poetry to a stoic framework so as to give his reader a lucid understanding of the limits of the self and the ineluctability of natural laws the collection of essays in this volume offers fresh insights into varied modalities of reception of epicurean thought among roman authors of the late republican and imperial eras its generic purview encompasses prose as well as poetic texts by both minor and major writers in the latin literary canon including the anonymous poems ciris and aetna and an elegy from the tibullan corpus by the female poet sulpicia major figures include the augustan poets vergil and horace and the late antique christian theologian augustine the method of analysis employed in the essays is uniformly interdisciplinary and reveals the depth of the engagement of each ancient author with major preoccupations of epicurean thought such as the balanced pursuit of erotic pleasure in the context of human flourishing and the role of the gods in relation to human existence the ensemble of nuanced interpretations testifies to the immense vitality of the epicurean philosophical tradition throughout greco-roman antiquity and thereby provides a welcome and substantial contribution to the burgeoning field of reception studies the fifteen contributions to the multilingual volume together chart cicero's presence in the cultural history of basel from the city's foundation to the heyday of humanist print culture to the cultural politics of the modern day written by scholars working from different academic traditions and organised in four sections they trace a broad range of engagements with cicero in basel across time thus offering the rudiments of a localised form of reception history ciceronian foundations focuses on cicero's role in the city's and her university's foundation myths editions and commentaries centres on the ciceronian editions and commentaries in the heyday of humanist printing culture discussions and engagements situates his reception in the intellectual currents that define humanist basel from stylistic and literary debates to the controversies of the theologians lastly scholarship and education explores the entanglements of academic and civic life that come to define cicero's place in basel from the 17th century for all their diversity the contributions are united in their aim to contribute both to the study of ciceronian reception and to the cultural history and development of basel in its european context the volume aims at complementing the international literature on the interaction between cicero and greece it offers new and unpublished material on cicero's presence in greece literally deriving from his epistles speeches and philosophical treatises but also on his interaction with the greek philosophical schools the greek language and politics etc besides it offers new knowledge on the appreciation and reception of cicero and his texts by the greek world from late antiquity to byzantium and modern greece based on material deriving from a variety of sources papyri manuscripts compendia or encyclopaedias imitations translations early editions etc an aspect of the relationships between cicero and greece still understudied thus the volume offers an image as illustrative as possible of various aspects of the presence of the greek world in cicero's works and of cicero's presence in greece from his own times to the present day was lucretius a fundamentalist epicurean and a mere repeater of his master s words or did he emerge as an innovative philosopher in his own right the relationship between lucretius and epicurus remains a complex and unresolved issue in epicurean scholarship to what extent was lucretius aware of intellectual debates following epicurus and how did he contribute to them the volume examines these questions through an epistemological lens focusing on the canonic the science of the criterion epicurus who died around 271 270 bc did not fully witness firsthand the impact of his doctrines on hellenistic epistemology nor could he defend them against subsequent criticisms tasks left to his successors by systematically examining the doctrine of the criterion of truth in de rerum natura this study shows how lucretius actively engaged in the defence and evolution of early epicureanism despite his fidelity to epicurus the poet displayed a remarkable philosophical ability to independently rethink and rework materials from both within the epicurean tradition and beyond thereby reiterating on a broader scale the non monolithic nature of the kepos it appeals to scholars interested in hellenistic and roman philosophy alike

this practical book is for people who are grieving for people who want to support them as they undertake the painful journey of grief and for anyone who wants to reflect on their own experiences of loss when alister asked isobel whose husband had died a few years before what would have helped her most then her response was immediate someone who would walk with me not people who would talk at me and give me answers but simply listen to me and walk with me the grief walk grieving and loss are universal experiences but how you experience grief is unique to you in his ministry alister has found that models of the stages of grief are unhelpful as is the idea of closure instead he gives you permission to work through your grief in the ways and at the times that are helpful to you alister explores disenfranchised grief that occurs when we are denied the right to grieve and our loss isn't recognised our lives are marked by countless losses and we all carry grief about many losses in our life if we embrace our grief we can journey on to something new and find fresh hope praise for the grief walk the grief walk has a freshness and honesty about grief beginning with its imaginative title and sustained until the final affirmation of hope we all experience loss and grief in our lives but as hendery writes until we name and acknowledge a loss and recognise that we have a right to grieve we are unable to come to terms with it he emphasises that grief doesn't follow a predetermined path and nor can we close it off like a tap he describes a perceived end process of closure as psychobabble while grief may not be permanently disabling we learn to encompass it this is not the same as closure grief may find expression in different physical and emotional symptoms and we can't expect religious faith to provide a magical answer finding someone who listens and understands who in a sense personifies the presence of god can help us with the grief journey the grief walk confronts the idea that grief is momentary or experienced in clearly defined stages and points to a hope this book is a gift for all who grieve or who walk with those who grieve john meredith in tui motu magazine issue 253 october 2020 27 far too often people present grieving as a one way process with well defined stages concluding with something they call closure i strongly reject such an extremely unhelpful model alister does also he is clear that your grieving is unique to you rev d bosco peters on liturgy co nz this book will read you as you are reading it it is a book you will pick up and put down and pick up and put down as you find yourself walking again through parts of your life maybe unexpectedly rediscovering boggy patches you had forgotten or not realised are still painful there is ancient wisdom here alongside modern psychology there is gentleness and there is a reality faced that grief is universal painful and not always an easy walk but beware as i read alister's words i found myself thinking lamenting crying and laughing i surprised myself with the depth of some of what rose to the surface for me ancient griefs recent disappointments and the ambivalent feelings that came like fish to breathe the air again from the foreword by the rev d rob ferguson contents title and copyright foreword preface acknowledgements how i use certain words authors who have influenced me 1 introduction 2 our lives are laden with losses acknowledging our losses disenfranchised losses and griefs 3 experiences of disenfranchised loss and grief grieving for those still living living loss and disability
