the interplay between knowledge and religion forms a pivotal component of how early modern individuals and societies understood themselves and their surroundings knowledge of the self in pursuit of salvation humanistic knowledge within a confessional education as well as inherently subversive knowledge acquired about religion s offer instructive instances of this interplay to these are added essays on medical knowledge in its religious and social contexts the changing role of imagination in scientific thought the philosophical and political problems of representation and attempts to counter enlightenment criteria of knowledge at the end of the period serving here as multifaceted studies of the dynamics and shifts in sensitivity and stress in the interplay between knowledge and religion within evolving early modern contexts

the book looks at how people things and new forms of knowledge created publics in early modern europe and how publics changed the shape of early modern society the focus is on what the authors call making publics the active creation of new forms of association that allowed people to connect with others in ways not rooted in family rank or vocation but rather founded in voluntary groupings built on the shared interests tastes commitments and desires of individuals by creating new forms of association cultural producers and consumers challenged dominant ideas about just who could be a public person greatly expanded the resources of public life for ordinary people in their own time and developed ideas and practices that have helped create the political culture of modernity coming from a number of disciplines including literary and cultural studies art history history of religion history of science and musicology the contributors develop analyses of a range of cases of early modern public making that together demonstrate the rich inventiveness and formative social power of artistic and intellectual publication in this period while there is an growing body of work on space and place in many disciplines less attention has been paid to how a spatial approach illuminates the societies and cultures of the past here leading experts explore the uses of space in two respects how space can be applied to the study of history and how space was used at specific times a detailed study of the domestic life of the early modern non elite household this book is a detailed study of the domestic life of the early modern non elite household focussing on the oxfordshire market town of thame going beyond the exploration of the domestic economy and trends in living standards and consumption it shows how close examination of the material context within which the household operated can provide evidence of its habitual activities the relationships between its members and the values that informed both the book uses a familiar source the probate inventory supplemented by other contemporary written and pictorial evidence to reveal how activities in the household were directly related to the agricultural mercantile and social environment it illustrates the variable and shifting nature of social relationships and shows how the early modern household was part of the wider economic and social narrative of modernism and how it responded to altered modes of production and consumption social allegiances and ideologies offering new perspectives to reinvigorate the discussion of domestic relationships and rigorously examine the vexed question of change domestic culture in earlymodern england will be of interest to scholars and postgraduate students of material culture as well as historians of the household and family more generally antony buxton lectures on design history material and domestic culture for the department for continuing education university of oxford and other institutions he has published articles in various scholarly journals and holds a phd from the university of oxford for early modern europeans the past was a measure of most things good and bad for that reason it was also hotly contested manipulated and far too important to be left to historians alone memory in early modern europe offers a lively and accessible introduction to the many ways in which europeans engaged with the past and practised memory in the three centuries between 1500 and 1800 from childhood memories and local customs to war traumas and peacekeeping it analyses how europeans tried to control mobilize and reconfigure memories of the past challenging the long standing view that memory cultures transformed around 1800 it argues for the continued relevance of early modern memory practices in modern societies this book is intended to assess the significance of kaidan specifically its multi dimensional reflection of an impact on japanese culture in the edo period the legacy of japan s cultural efflorescence in the late eighteenth century was far reaching its fruits often seen as epitomizing the entire tokugawa period in the years between the kan en era 1748 1751 and the chilling effects of the kansei reforms 1790 there was no dearth of innovative belletristic expression but in the area of fiction the yomihon of ueda akinari 1734 1809 eclipse all else professor reider s outstanding study treats this unusual scion of a remarkable age contextualizing his work from a unique perspective under various noms de plume akinari authored significant works in several genres of both poetry and prose but his greatest opus is incontrovertibly his ugetsu monogatari tales of moonlight and rain a collection of nine stories that revolutionized tales of the supernatural elevating the genre to unprecedented levels of style and sophistication such a work deserves and has duly received ample critical attention from scholars on both sides of the pacific resulting in a plethora of seco pioneering investigation into relationship between physical sense of taste and taste as a term denoting judgement in early modern england kevin de ornellas argues that in renaissance england the relationship between horse and rider works as an unambiguous symbol of domination by the strong over the weak there was little sentimental concern for animal welfare leading to the routine abuse of the material animal this unproblematic practical exploitation of the horse led to the currency of the horse rider relationship as a trope or symbol of exploitation in the literature of the period engaging with fiction plays poems and non fictional prose works of late tudor and early stuart england de ornellas demonstrates that the horse a bridled unwilling slave becomes a yardstick against which the oppression of england s poor women increasingly uninfluential clergyman and deluded gamblers is measured the status of the bitted harnessed horse was a low one in early modern england to be compared to such a beast is a demonstration of inferiority and subjugation to think anything else is to be naïve about the realities of horse management in the period and is to be naïve about the realities of the exploitation of horses and other mammals in the present day world the early modern period witnessed the rise of a new and powerful merchant class across europe the market and the city takes a comparative approach to the effect merchants and traders had on the urban history of market places streets squares and specific buildings in some of the great commercial european cities between the 15th and 17th centuries it looks at how the transformations of designated commercial areas were important enough to modify relationships throughout the entire urban context market places tend to be very ancient continuing to function for centuries on the same location but between the middle of the 14th and the first decades of the 17th their structures began to change as new regulations and patterns of manufacture distribution and consumption began to install a new uniformity and geometry on the market place during the period covered by this study most major european cities undertook the rebuilding of entire zones constructing new buildings demolishing existing structures and embellishing others
