in communes and conflict jan dumolyn and jelle haemers explore the urban rebellions that regularly erupted in flanders between the thirteenth and sixteenth centuries they analyse not only how these rebellions were sparked and repressed but also how they shaped the culture and identity of flemish townspeople drawing from a wide range of theoretical methods and concepts including those of discourse analysis semiotics speech acts collective memory and material cultural studies the authors return to key marxist questions on ideology labour and class interest to map the perspectives of the rebels the urban patriciate and the flemish and burgundian nobility this volume offers a fascinating insight into the continuities and discontinuities in the formation of identities in the low countries and its neighbouring countries it is an important contribution to the ongoing debates about national and other identities in recent political and legal history scholars seldom specify how and why they use the concept of territory in research on state formation processes and nation building for instance the term mostly designates an enclosed geographical area ruled by a central government inspired by ideas from political geographers this book explores the layered and constantly changing meanings of territory in late medieval and early modern europe before cartography and state formation turned boundaries and territories into more fixed but still changeable geographical entities its central thesis is that assessing the notion of territory in a pre modern setting involves analysing territorial practices practices that relate people and power to space s the essays in this book not only examine the construction and spatial structure of pre modern territories but also explore their perception and representation through the use of a broad range of sources from administrative texts to maps from stained glass windows to chronicles
