the growing interest in the relationship between religion and law is in the case of christianity often viewed in monolithic terms moreover the debate is often seen in terms of the relationship of christianity to the state along with discussions about for example religious freedom christianity is often seen as responding to claims made on it by the state and by the growth of secularism this book takes a different approach first it makes the claim that christianity has something of value to say about various pressing issues which are of direct relevance to contemporary society amongst these are the place of human rights and that of individual claims of conscience second it does not regard christianity as a monolithic whole but takes as its starting point the sundering of christendom at the reformation which it claims led in many cases to divergent patterns of thought between catholics and protestants about law and its place in society however as this book shows in many cases catholic and protestant thinking on areas such as natural law is not as divergent as it is often thought five hundred years after the reformation the work presents a reflection on the roots of catholic and protestant thinking on law and its place in society it will be of interest to canon lawyers as well as academics and students of law and religion
