essay from the year 2007 in the subject politics general and theories of international politics grade 10 university of twente school of management and governance course international relations theory language english abstract writing an essay about andrew linklater's the transformation of political community is in light of the pre eminent praise it received in the academic sphere a distinct challenge is it actually possible to make critical statements about a book which others have called one of the most important books in international theory published in this decade or even the most impressive work of international theory to have been produced in Britain since Bull's anarchical society the mere quantity of laud is as impressive as its quality one easily tends to follow this blandishment and ignores that it is not more than base flattery beyond doubt Linklater has produced a sound book which has after his preliminary publications the problem of community in international relations in 1990 and the question of the next stage in international relations a critical theoretical point of view in 1992 made him one of the strongest voices in contemporary international relations theory I hypothesize that the transformation of political community has already today only nine years after its first publication become a classic of international relations what defines a classic two factors are decisive and they are the same for a classic in international relations than they are for a classic car it is cherished by people and it has a unique selling point something that differs from everything that has been produced before using this definition an Aston Martin DB5 is a classic as well as Kenneth Waltz's Man, the State and War a classic as complete and coherent it might be is not necessarily without problems several times Aston Martin went bankrupt and was reborn again and for Waltz's neorealism the sudden and peaceful collapse of the Soviet Union meant the end of its universal validity gender is revealed as a central organizing principle in social life when the unexpected transforms daily routines environments and social institutions using specific disaster experiences from around the world this book argues for a gendered perspective in policy practice and research contributing authors challenge the image of women as hapless victim in their accounts of women who rebuilt flooded homes in Bangladesh evacuated families from Australian bushfires reconstructed communities after a Mexican earthquake and mobilized women in Miami in the wake of Hurricane Andrew from Bangladesh to Scotland the case studies document the root causes of women's vulnerability to disaster and the central roles they play before during and after disaster the authors recommend strategies for policy makers and emergency practitioners to more fully engage women in disaster planning and response society has limited hazard mitigation dollars to invest which actions will be most cost effective considering the true range of impacts and costs incurred in 1997 the John Heinz III Center for Science Economics and the Environment began a two year study with a panel of experts to help develop new strategies to identify and reduce the costs of weather related hazards associated with rapidly increasing coastal development activities the hidden costs of coastal hazards presents the panel's findings offering the first in depth study that considers the costs of coastal hazards to natural resources social institutions business and the built environment using hurricane hugo which struck south carolina in 1989 as a case study it provides for the first time information on the full range of economic costs caused by a major coastal hazard event the book describes and examines unreported undocumented and hidden costs such as losses due to business interruption reduction in property values interruption of social services psychological trauma damage to natural systems and others examines the concepts of risk and vulnerability and discusses conventional approaches to risk assessment and the emerging area of vulnerability assessment recommends a comprehensive framework for developing and implementing mitigation strategies documents the human impact of hurricane hugo and provides insight from those who lived through it the hidden costs of coastal hazards takes a structured approach to the problem of coastal hazards offering a new framework for community based hazard mitigation along with specific recommendations for implementation decisionmakers both policymakers and planners who are interested in coastal hazard issues will find the book a unique source of new information and insight as will private sector decisionmakers including lenders investors developers and insurers of coastal property studies over the last twenty years show that understanding the social and economic forces that govern society and create vulnerability should have the same emphasis as understanding the physical causes of vulnerability in this monograph dr bosher investigates what social networks and institutions are available created or imposed to people that enable them to cope with the large crises that are alas prevalent in south india tropical cyclones earthquakes tsunamis massive flooding environmental poisoning wastewater spillage as well as large scale poverty misgovernment and endemic disease this work offers material on disaster risk management processes and the multi disciplinary integration of these processes within long term developmental and ameliorative initiatives chapter one introduction chapter two conceptual and theoretical underpinnings chapter three contextual study of case study areas chapter four methodology chapter five contextual analysis chapter six factors that influence levels of vulnerability chapter seven social influences upon levels of vulnerability chapter eight conclusions and recommendations a fine contribution to the intersection of engineering public policy disaster preparedness and developmental planning recommended for research libraries excellent research in south india dr randolph langenbach formerly fema researcher uno unesco
