the central question posed in this book is whether or not newfoundland is becoming more violent three different papers examine various dimensions of crime and violence in the province from an historical perspective illustrating how public perceptions of crime are formed the first paper by william o grady discusses how violence is defined and measured based on examination of how official statistics are compiled and used he assesses their ability to accurately record the incidence of violence the next paper by elliott leyton investigates the role played by the press and by various interest groups in the period since the mid 1970s in shaping and sustaining the idea that newfoundland is in the midst of a wave of crime and violence overton s paper is an historical case study which examines the complex relationships between violence questions of popular protest public order and economic and political conditions in newfoundland in the 1930s the markedly increased attention focused on violence within families has gripped the concerned interest not only of academic researchers but also that of the public and its law enforcement and criminal justice segments contemporary recognition of the widespread problem of abuse within the home often dramatically and poignantly detailed has not however led to clear and universally accepted public institutional responses this authoritative volume presents a comprehensive evaluation of approaches policies and practical enforcement measures that have been effected by law enforcement and criminal justice bodies the development of changes in social attitudes to spousal abuse the role of the police and the practical interventions they may impose when contacted the ramifications which decisions to prosecute may have on defendants subsequent behavior and the victims responses to public interventions are topics that are all covered by this book it is a current substantive and practically instructive volume on a social issue of vital importance for decades political scientists studying the court have adopted behavioral approaches and focused on the relatively narrow question of how the justices policy preferences influence their voting behavior this emphasis has illuminated important aspects of supreme court politics but it has also left unaddressed many other important questions about this unique and fascinating institution drawing on the new institutionalism in the social sciences the distinguished contributors to this volume attempt to fill this gap by exploring a variety of topics including the court s institutional development and its relationship to broader political contexts such as party regimes electoral systems social movements social change legal precedents political identities and historically evolving economic structures the book s initial chapters examine the nature of the court s distinctive norms as well as the development of its institutional powers and practice a second section relates the development of supreme court politics to the historical development of other political institutions and social movements concluding chapters explore how its decision making in particular areas of law or periods of time is influenced by and influences its socio political milieu these contributions offer provocative insights regarding the court s role in maintaining or disrupting political and economic structures as well as social structures and identities tied to ideology class race gender and sexual orientation the supreme court in american politics shows how we can develop an enriched understanding of this institution and open up exciting new areas of research by placing it in the broader context of politics in the united states

somewhat overlooked in this debate has been how mandatory arrest and no drop prosecution affect abusers a critical question for understanding the power of criminal punishment to combat intimate partner abuse in arresting abuse keith guzik answers this question drawing both from firsthand observations of a police department and a criminal court following mandatory policies and extensive interviews with 30 offenders arrested and prosecuted for domestic violence arresting abuse provides a critical assessment while mandatory arrest and no drop prosecution allow the state to extend formal legal supervision over an increasing number of violent men and women thus seemingly increasing its power over them offenders prove resistant to change they see themselves as victims of injustice continue to view their violence as justified and devise new strategies to preserve their definition and enactment of self the three days of 1984 when over 3000 sikhs were slaughtered have indelibly marked the lives of thousands more who continue to exist in a twilight of bitterness and despair it was outrage at this state of affairs that led jarnail singh an unassuming law abiding journalist to throw his shoe at home minister p chidambaram during a press conference in new delhi he readily acknowledges that this was not an appropriate means of protest but asks why twenty seven years after the massacres so little has been done to address the issues that are still unresolved and a source of anguish to the whole community i accuse is a powerful and passionate indictment of the state s response to the killings of 1984 by exploring the chain of events the survivors stories and the continuing shadow it casts over their lives singh seeks answers to some relevant questions who initiated the pogrom and why why did the state apparatus allow it to happen why despite the many commissions and committees set up to investigate the events have the perpetrators not been brought to book because finally 1984 was not an attack on the sikh community alone it was an attack on the idea at the very core of democracy that every citizen irrespective of faith and community has a right to life security and justice
