The Book of the Acts of the Apostles is written by Luke and is more or less a continuation of his gospel account. In this book he attempts to enlighten us about the beginnings of the Christian church and its gradual spread to nearby and distant lands. His Book of Acts chronicles the sudden explosion of missionary activities led by the apostle Paul, Barnabas, Silas, and other prominent early church workers. In Luke's gospel account, he emphasized the ministry of the Holy Spirit in the life of Christ Jesus. However, in the Book of Acts, he emphasizes the role of the Holy Spirit in the growth and development of the early Christian church in its infancy.

During the second invasion of Jerusalem 597 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar deported an even larger group of Judah's upper and middle class citizens to Babylon. Among this group was a young twenty-six-year-old priest in training named Ezekiel. This group of Jewish captives was placed in the region of Tel Aviv along a wide canal that links two branches of the Euphrates known as the Kebar River. There they were treated more as colonists than slaves and enjoyed many privileges. It was there on the banks of the Kebar River that in 593 B.C. a now thirty-old Ezekiel received his calling from God. Ezekiel 1:2: Thirty years old is the minimum age that priests are actually allowed to begin serving in the temple. Numbers 4:13: And so as the Lord would have it. It was from that place that Ezekiel first served the Lord by delivering his first prophetic message to his fellow captives in Babylon.

Paul's first letter to the church at Corinth was written to address the many problems that had cropped up immediately following his founding of the church there during his second missionary journey (Acts 18:1-8). The believers in Corinth had begun to question Paul's authority as an apostle appointed by Christ. They were also misusing worship, suing each other in court, engaging in all sorts of immorality, and even denying that the resurrection of Christ ever took place.

The curriculum produced by the Church of God in Christ is prepared to train and nurture this generation in the faith. Use it and cherish the very opportunity you have to tutor the next generation of Bible reading and word believing saints in a world of need.
