there are more than 1.8 million nonprofits in the United States and at least 3 times that many internationally. Workers in these nonprofits and civil society organizations increasingly look to academic programs to provide leadership and management training. This edited volume is designed to provide new and experienced faculty and program administrators with a broader conception of how the nonprofit leaders of the future are and could be educated. The chapters are written by experienced nonprofit program leaders who provide guidance on all aspects of building and more importantly maintaining a successful nonprofit program. Many of the chapters are written by former leaders of the nonprofit academic centers council (NACC), a recognized international leader in nonprofit management curricular development. While others are written by successful founders and administrators of nonprofit programs both in the US and internationally, all chapters are however grounded in the experience of the authors, supplemented with research on best practices and focusing on future trends in the field. Preparing leaders of nonprofit organizations examines key issues and challenges in the field from multiple perspectives, some of which are curricular and intellectual, while others are related to program administration and oversight. The text explores core concepts, distills distinctive features of new or emerging academic programs, and identifies ways program leadership might ensure those features are reflected in their programs regardless of where these are housed within a university. The book is an essential resource for faculty and administrators who work with or are seeking to develop a nonprofit education program. It is also a useful guide for graduate students seeking a career in the nonprofit academy.

Emerging multinational enterprises (EMNEs) have made a huge impact on the international business stage by internationalising at a rapid rate and they have performed remarkably well in both developing and developed countries. Accordingly, there is a growing strand of literature on how EMNEs manage their international human resource management (HRM) practices in different international contexts. However, the majority of the literature on HRM practices of EMNEs is limited to explaining what international management practices EMNEs implement in their foreign subsidiaries and how they implement them. Too often, EMNEs struggle to transfer their weak management practices across national borders as they have limited experience, resources, and capabilities when compared to MNEs from developed countries. Developing a better understanding on the manner in which EMNEs adopt their international human resource management and development practices abroad is therefore paramount to fully understand their globalisation-related behaviours. This dedicated book will aim to provide a holistic picture and contemporary insights on HRM in emerging multinational enterprises. It will be of interest to researchers, academics, and students in the fields of business and management, especially those with a particular interest in human resource management, firm internationalisation, and emerging markets.

This book aims to be a forum for sharing best practices and experiences by addressing issues of academic integrity from a wide scope, global perspective. It is dealing with consistent and transparent approaches to issues of academic integrity from several perspectives
