the oxford handbook to european romanticism brings together leading scholars in the field to examine the intellectual literary philosophical and political elements of european romanticism the book focuses on the cultural history of the period extending from the french revolution to the uprisings of 1848 it begins with a series of chapters examining key texts written by major writers in languages including french german italian spanish russian hungarian greek and polish amongst others a second section then explores the naturally interdisciplinary quality of romanticism exemplified by the different discourses with which writers of the time set up an internal comparative dynamic these chapters highlight the sense a discourse gives of being written knowledgeably against other pretenders to completeness or comprehensiveness of self understanding of the time discourses typically advance their own claims to resume european culture collaborating with and at the same time trying to assimilate each other in the process the main examples featured here are history geography drama theology language philosophy political theory the sciences and the media each chapter offers an original and individual interpretation of an inherently comparative world of individual writers and the discursive idioms to which they are historically subject together the forty one chapters provide a comprehensive and provocative overview of european romanticism studying three tragic authors to explore the meanings and consequences of modernity the emergence of a distinctly modern form of tragedy is often associated with the introduction of middle class characters and settings to high drama during the early eighteenth century what has not been explored previously however is how such tragedy uses modernity s social circumstances to stage metaphysical conditions that are destructive to human worlds leonardo f lisi pursues this argument by focusing on three central yet distinct figures in the history of modern thought and theater eighteenth century english dramatist george lillo early nineteenth century italian poet giacomo leopardi and late nineteenth century norwegian iconoclast henrik ibsen modern tragedy and the end of worlds lillo leopardi ibsen shows that their works share a critical theme the impossibility of sustaining human forms of meaning in the face of modern materialism finance and reason viewed in this light lisi argues that modern tragedy requires thinking together the incommensurable scales of human existence and the inhuman processes on which it rests a task that continues to have profound relevance for imagining the end of worlds in the anthropocene

are you curious about the private laboratory of giacomo leopardi italy s greatest modern lyrical poet interested in using expert maps to explore it while deepening your acquaintance with one of the most creative materialist thinkers this collection of essays makes very original use of the new translation of leopardi s zibaldone di pensieri and investigates its connections to all his other works whether your primary interest lies in italian literature and criticism linguistics and poetics the origins of genres such as the fantastic or in philosophical queries regarding materialism and hedonism this collection offers original research that will challenge the reader to view this outstanding intellectual in a new light offering some of the earliest reflections against anthropocentrism championing the artist s interest in the natural sciences and questioning humanity s purpose s in this world leopardi s work is presented in this volume as an indispensable tool to understand the complexity of italy s cultural transformations between the 18th and the 19th centuries
