Students of marketing must sort their way through a plethora of concepts, terms, and jargon. Norman A. Govoni's dictionary is the answer: compact, accurate, and accessible. It stands as an authoritative resource and a valuable adjunct to our marketing course materials. Robb Kopp, Babson College, says the Dictionary of Marketing Communications is the most authoritative and comprehensive lexicon of marketing terms available today, presented in down-to-earth language. It promises to be an essential and enduring resource for students, beginners, and seasoned professionals alike. Suzanne B. Walchli, University of the Pacific, says the Dictionary of Marketing Communications contains more than 4,000 entries, including key terms and concepts in the promotion aspect of marketing, with coverage of advertising, sales promotion, public relations, direct marketing, personal selling, and e-marketing. Growing out of a database of terms compiled over many years by the author for use in his marketing classes at Babson College, this dictionary is a living, growing document reflecting the changing dynamics of the marketing profession. It will be an essential reference to practitioners, managers, academics, students, and individuals with an interest in marketing and promotion. Key features provide an up-to-date, accurate, comprehensive collection of terms and concepts that are essential for an understanding of the basic promotion functions of marketing. Entries are clear, applied, practical, and non-technical, designed for both students and professionals. International entries are included to give the reader a greater awareness of the language of marketing than has been previously available. About the author: Norman A. Govoni is professor of marketing at Babson College, where he served as division chair for fifteen years (1975-1990). He is the author of several textbooks, including Promotional Management, Fundamentals of Modern Marketing, Sales Management, and Cases in Marketing, all published by Prentice Hall. Among his honors is the Carpenter Prize for outstanding contributions to Babson College.

Written for introductory marketing classes, this text explains what information is needed to plan and implement a successful marketing campaign and how to find that data, including details on finding such relevant facts as the size of a potential market, the shopping and buying habits of consumers in that market, and the competitive and environmental factors that may affect a campaign. This primer will guide readers to become savvy marketing managers.
