language english abstract the unidroit principles of international commercial contracts1 have been published in may 1994 by the rome based international institute for the the working group on the unidroit principles was founded in 1980 and consisted of independent legal scholars of all major legal systems of the world the unidroit principles are not binding law most legal writers agree that they can be characterised as a restatement of the law of international commercial contracts2 and despite the possibility of applying supranational law to international legal relationships most authors agree that it exists and that the unidroit principles are a significant part of it3 the object chapter 6 section 2 and to compare it with its equivalent provision in the german civil code bürgerliches gesetzbuch hereinafter bgb 3134 for this purpose it is firstly necessary to define the term hardship thereafter i will consider the respective provisions in detail the collection as a whole provides both a survey of the place of individual typological schools in the historiography of the subject and a comprehensive account of the present state of language typology in an international context it gives an overview of both the underlying unity of and the differences in the methods employed in the field
