regulated providers are a significant component of personal health care spending in the United States. This report presents descriptive results from the first wave of the national study of long-term care providers, NSLTCP, which was conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS). This report provides information on the supply, organizational characteristics, staffing, and services offered by providers of long-term care services and the demographic health and functional composition of users of these services. Service users include residents of nursing homes and residential care communities, patients of home health agencies and hospices, and participants of adult day services centers.

Care in nursing addresses the fundamental caring principles, values, and skills nurses require to provide sound care to their patients and to meet the challenges of nursing in the future. Exploring essential knowledge and competencies, the authors explore research evidence and real-life practice before outlining practical skills which will empower nurses to deliver quality care. Written by nurses and health professionals from both practice and academia, Care in Nursing explores how care underpins every element of nursing, including patient-centered care, cultural diversity, sociology, psychology, communication, partnership, working law, and ethics, management, and leadership. And more, a specific chapter also addresses how nurses can develop self-care techniques to meet the pressures and demands of a challenging yet ultimately rewarding career relevant to nurses in all fields and a diverse range of clinical and non-clinical settings. This is essential reading for nursing students, qualified nurses, mentors, nursing academics, as well as nurse managers and leaders.
