on the one hand then this is traditional historiography the history of history writing on the other hand the problem is approached via recent work in the philosophy of history closely analysing historical works as texts this is an interdisciplinary study that brings to bear on historiography the kind of textual analysis usually reserved for fiction testimony or film the holocaust precisely because it throws into doubt older methodologies demands the search for new ones showing how holocaust historians inadvertently and paradoxically reinscribe into the wider culture patterns of thought that the holocaust repudiated constructing the holocaust tries to respond to the holocaust in a way that recognises its potential impact on usually unquestioned beliefs and unspoken methodological assumptions book jacket distinguished literary scholar geoffrey h hartman himself forced to leave germany at age nine collects his essays both scholarly and personal that focus on the holocaust hartman contends that although progress has been made we are only beginning to understand the horrendous events of 1933 to 1945 the continuing struggle for meaning consolation closure and the establishment of a collective memory against the natural tendency toward forgetfulness is a recurring theme the many forms of response to the devastation from historical research and survivors testimony to the novels films and monuments that have appeared over the last fifty years reflect and inform efforts to come to grips with the past despite events like those at bitburg that attempt to foreclose it the stricture that poetry after auschwitz is barbaric is countered by the increased sense of responsibility incumbent on the creators of these works for over half a century germans have lived in the shadow of auschwitz who was responsible for the mass murder of millions of people in the holocaust just a small gang of evil men hitler and his henchmen or certain groups within a particular system or even the whole nation could the roots of malignancy be traced far back in german history or did the holocaust have more to do with european modernity should germans live with a legacy of guilt forever and how if at all could an acceptable german national identity be defined these questions dogged public debates in both east and west germany in the long period of division both states officially claimed to have overcome the past more effectively than the other both sought to construct new opposing identities as the better germany but in different ways official claims ran at odds with the kaleidoscope of popular collective memories dissonances sensitivities and taboos were the order of the day on both sides of the wall and in the 1990s with continued heated debates over past and present it was clear that inner unity appeared to be no automatic consequence of formal unification drawing on a wide range of material from landscapes of memory and rituals of commemoration through private diaries oral history interviews and public opinion poll surveys to the speeches of politicians and the writings of professional historians fulbrook provides a clear analysis of key controversies events and patterns of historical and national consciousness in east and west germany in equal depth arguing against essentialist conceptions of the nation fulbrook presents a theory of the nation as a constructed community of shared legacy and common destiny and shows how the conditions for the easy construction of any such identity have been notably lacking in germany after the holocaust this book will be of interest to advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students in history politics and german and european studies as well as established scholars and interested members of the public
