researchers have long had an interest in dental morphology as a genetic proxy to reconstruct population history much interest was fostered by the use of standard plaques and associated descriptions that comprise the arizona state university dental anthropology system developed by christy g turner ii and students this system has served as the foundation for hundreds of anthropological studies for over 30 years in recognition of that success this volume brings together some of the world s leading dental morphologists to expand upon the concepts and methods presented in the popular the anthropology of modern human teeth cambridge 1997 leading the reader from method to applied research after a preparatory section on the current knowledge of heritability and gene expression a series of case studies demonstrate the utility of dental morphological study in both fossil and more recent populations and individuals from local to global scales the second volume covers the first two and a half thousand years of recorded history from the start of the bronze age 5 000 years ago to the beginnings of the iron age written by a team of over sixty specialists this volume includes a comprehensive bibliography and a detailed index this book focuses on south american archaeology and its contributions to the broader global archaeological discussion in theory methods and new interpretations of the archaeological record these include discussions on human peopling and colonization of the continent domestication of plants and emergence of complex societies this volume covers a wide variety of sub disciplines in archaeology including archaeobotany zooarchaeology molecular archaeology bioarchaeology geoarchaeology the chapters span from the pre columbian to contemporaneous indigenous societies for all the main geographical and ecological zones of south america the book discusses how particular cases of south american archaeology have contributed to the understanding of a global and basic issue human relations with their environments and landscapes during the past the authors focus on the latest results produced by multidisciplinary studies carried out at archaeological sites in several areas of south america ranging from studies of early hunter gatherers through the historic period this work would be of interest to researchers in archaeology and latin american studies contains papers presented at the commission on the peopling of the americas convened at the 10th congress of the international union of prehistoric and protohistoric sciences in mexico city in october 1981 in this work a sample of 3 001 pre columbian metal objects from the central eastern cordillera colombia a d 600 1500 is described and analysed the study offers a classification description and analysis of adornments with respect to their function iconography geographic distribution and archaeological context and describes the metallurgical technology employed in their manufacture archaeological and ethnohistorical data is used to interpret the information collected and to propose a new scheme which considers the existence of three sub areas and three styles within the region the work then focuses on votive items a classification system based on the main iconographic attributes of the figures underpins an exploration of their distribution and the associations between types finally the author proposes a new interpretation of votive offerings among the chibcha speaking communities of the eastern cordillera based on the dualistic cosmovision which ruled the main iconographic patterns and the distribution and composition of assemblages that new view says dillehay will come mainly from south america from south american sites and from freedom from the north american dogma that kept the clovis theory dominant for so many years when many scholars are asked about early human settlement in the americas they might point to a handful of archaeological sites as evidence yet the process was not a simple one and today there is no consistent argument favoring a particular scenario for the peopling of the new world this book approaches the human settlement of the americas from a biogeographical perspective in order to provide a better understanding of the mechanisms and consequences of this unique event it considers many of the questions that continue to surround the peopling of the western hemisphere focusing not on sites dates and artifacts but rather on theories and models that attempt to explain how the colonization occurred unlike other studies this book draws on a wide range of disciplinesÑarchaeology human genetics and osteology linguistics ethnology and ecologyÑto present the big picture of this migration its wide ranging content considers who the pleistocene settlers were and where they came from their likely routes of migration and the ecological role of these pioneers and the consequences of colonization comprehensive in both geographic and topical coverage the contributions include an explanation of how the first inhabitants could have spread across north america within several centuries the most comprehensive review of new mitochondrial dna and y chromosome data relating to the colonization and a critique of recent linguistic theories although the authors lean toward a conservative rather than an extreme chronology this volume goes beyond the simplistic emphasis on dating that has dominated the debate so far to a concern with late pleistocene forager adaptations and how foragers may have coped with a wide range of environmental and ecological factors it offers researchers in this exciting field the most complete summary of current knowledge and provides non specialists and general readers with new answers to the questions surrounding the origins of the first americans
