whether inspired by the frankfurt school or antonio gramsci the impact of critical theory on the study of international relations has grown considerably since its advent in the early 1980s this book offers the first intellectual history of critical international theory richard devetak approaches this history by locating its emergence in the rising prestige of theory and the theoretical persona as theory's prestige rose in the discipline of international relations it opened the way for normative and metatheoretical reconsiderations of the discipline and the world the book traces the lines of intellectual inheritance through the frankfurt school to the enlightenment german idealism and historical materialism to reveal the construction of a particular kind of intellectual persona the critical international theorist who has mastered reflexive dialectical forms of social philosophy in addition to the extensive treatment of critical theory's reception and development in international relations the book recovers a rival form of theory that originates outside the usual inheritance of critical international theory in renaissance humanism and the civil enlightenment this historical mode of theorising was intended to combat metaphysical encroachments on politics and international relations and to prioritise the mundane demands of civil government over the self reflective demands of dialectical social philosophies by proposing contextualist intellectual history as a form of critical theory critical international theory defends a mode of historical critique that refuses the normative temptations to project present conceptions onto an alien past and to abstract from the offices of civil government central to most sociologists self image is the claim that their theories are based on research however using a random sample of 680 articles appearing in major american british and canadian journals dr menzies shows that in some areas of sociology the wide gap between theory and research means that much of sociological theory is virtually untested he explains how theory is embodied in eight particular types of research critically examines these research theories and contrasts them with the positions of modern theorists the sample of journal articles also permits a comparison of british american and canadian sociology by contrasting on how researchers use theories dr menzies is able to reassess several theories for instance symbolic interactionist research uses embedded causal claims and stands in a dialectical relationship to other sociological research while the research version of conflict theory depends on external causes to explain social change the implications of using statistical techniques like factor analysis and regression are also considered in relation to the form of explanation this volume advocates a shift from the social constructivism found in the work of thomas luckmann and peter berger to a communicative constructivism that acknowledges communication as an embodied form of action in its own right according to which social actors in engaging in communicative action construct a material social reality that guides delimits and enables actions a study of the importance of understanding the role of communication in an age in which digitization and mediatization have extended the reach of communication to a global level and brought about the emergence of the communication society the communicative construction of reality shows how communication society does not merely replace modern society and its hierarchical institutions but complements it in a manner that continually results in conflicts leading to the refiguration of society as such it will appeal to scholars of sociology with interests in the sociology of knowledge communication and social theory
