since 1945 japan has successfully reinvented itself rising from the ashes of defeat to become a peaceful and prosperous nation it is seen as an inspiration for other developing nations and contributes significantly to global development as the third largest economy in the world with a reputation for technological innovation and cultural creativity japan is a country shaping the world we live in in this new edition of japan in transformation jeffrey kingston explores the character of the nation as it has evolved since the end of the second world war the book examines the us occupation and explains the causes of the economic miracle and its demise evaluates the effect of the lost decade of the 1990s and the unravelling of the japan inc system that prevailed in the twentieth century analyses such central and topical issues as the demographic crisis regional relations security concerns political change and the role of women expanded and thoroughly revised to cover the period of 1945 to 2010 this second edition of japan in transformation provides a succinct and comprehensive study of the recent history of one of the most dynamic nations in the modern world urbanizing china in war and peace rewrites the history of rural urban relations in the first half of the twentieth century by arguing that urbanization is a total societal transformation and as important a factor as revolution nationalism or modernity in the history of modern china linking the global and the local in space and time china s urbanization was not only driven by industrial capitalism and the expansion of the state but also shaped how these forces influenced daily life in the city and the countryside although the conflict that beset china after the japanese invasion in 1937 affected the development of cities towns and villages it did not derail previous changes to truly understand how china has emerged as the world s largest urban society we must consider such continuities across the first half of the twentieth century during periods of war as well as peace the book focuses on wuxi a city that lies a hundred miles to the west of shanghai in the early twentieth century local industrialists were responsible for it quickly becoming the largest industrial city in china outside treaty ports they built factories roads and other infrastructure outside the old city walls and in surrounding towns and villages chapters examine the county s transformation as recorded in guidebooks and travel magazines of the time and the role of the state in the early 1920s and into the nanjing decade when new administrative laws led to the continued expansion of the city under both municipal and county officials they explore the revival of the silk industry during the japanese occupation and the industry s role in driving urbanization as well as efforts by chinese leaders to carry out prewar development plans despite lockdowns and qingxiang clean the countryside campaigns in the midst of the barbed wire and watch towers plans to shape the built environment in wuxi county and the region as a whole persisted and were carried out ambitious and well researched urbanizing china in war and peace will appeal to scholars and students of chinese urban history the anti japanese war of resistance and the republican period its engagement with issues of urbanization in general will interest urban historians of other times and places the world that lies in store for us over the next 25 years will surely challenge our received wisdom about how to protect american interests and advance american values with these words the commission on national security in the 21st century captured the exciting challenges this study sets out to explore first this study develops a generalized model for united states military transformations in peacetime to develop the model the author combines observations made by several historians about recurrent trends in military strategic innovation the author concludes that after taking into account inevitable uncertainty there are three identifiable factors that occur in most cases of military transformation the three key factors are the need for a coherent congruent vision an emerging culture that bolsters the vision and develops competing theories of victory to fulfill the vision and a process for honestly assessing the maturing vision and its supporting theories of victory after defining the limitations of the model and its usefulness the author applies the framework to an important aspect of national security the future of space power the framework is used to study the recent approach to space power from a civilian policy and military application perspective application of the transformation model highlights some important points about the present approach for developing space power first the civilian vision is not completely congruent with the military vision and the military vision is inconsistent second the military primarily the air force has made moderate but hesitant progress towards nurturing a space power culture with some unexpected consequences third the military has an uncoordinated haphazard approach to assessment that blurs the merit of the space power vision and associated theories this study continues the research that the author began in his future of global governance 1994 for the hungarian academy of science s institute for world economics simai argues that the capacity of nations to collectively manage the identified critical issues of new economic security and environment risks and opportunities needs to be upgraded he notes that human rights and poverty were key foci of the un s millennium assembly lacks an index distributed in the us by isbs annotation copyrighted by book news inc portland or
