there is perhaps no other more lively area for study in medieval history than medieval military history with its attendant and complementary field the history of medieval military technology in the past twenty years it seems that more major scholarly inroads have been made in this field than in any other historical genre of medieval studies or chronological period of military history what this has meant is that it is now more difficult to keep up with all of the trends and sources in the field than ever before hence the need for a reference work which covers what has previously been written and which in turn can assist the scholar both the more experienced academic and the beginner to improve his or her work in medieval military history or the history of medieval military technology utilizing library catalogues bibliographies and footnotes this bibliography has compiled the most complete list of secondary references to works in medieval military history and the history of military technology it keeps fairly strictly to a geography which centers on conventional medieval boundaries europe byzantium and the middle east however the chronology does differ from the conventional medieval dates because of its influence on the early middle ages references to late antiquity especially to the military history and technology of the third and fourth century roman empire have been included for the opposite reason the influence of the middle ages on the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries references to military history and technology up to 1648 have been included as well this is especially important in the study of the ottoman turkish wars and arms and armor where the end of the fifteenth century as a chronological terminus makes little sense in this far reaching exploration of the evolution of warfare in human history jack s levy and william r thompson provide insight into the perennial questions of why and how humans fight beginning with the origins of warfare among foraging groups the arc of war draws on a wealth of empirical data to enhance our understanding of how war began and how it has changed over time the authors point to the complex interaction of political economy political and military organization military technology and the threat environment all of which create changing incentives for states and other actors they conclude that those actors that adapt survive and those that do not are eliminated in modern times warfare between major powers has become exceedingly costly and therefore quite rare while lesser powers are too weak to fight sustained and decisive wars or to prevent internal rebellions conceptually innovative and historically sweeping the arc of war represents a significant contribution to the existing literature on warfare
