the chronicles of two west african kingdoms presents a new reading of west african history from the fifteenth to the nineteenth centuries based on close analysis of arabic manuscripts from timbuktu and other regions this volume provides key historical context from the songhay empire through the caliphate of amadallhi along with translations and arabic editions of the long obscured trkh ibn al mukhtar in parallel with the later production known as the trkh al fattash the central observation that emerges from these texts is that muslim scholars in premodern west africa who saw themselves as constitutive to the powerful kingdoms in the western sudan claimed almost unprecedented authority to shape reality through narration schweinfurth was a german botanist and ethnologist sent in 1868 by the humboldt stiftung of berlin on an important scientific mission to the interior of east africa he travelled from khartoum up the white nile to bahr el ghazal and then through the regions inhabited by the diur dinka bongo and niam niam peoples crossing the congo nile watershed he entered the country of the mangbetu and discovered the river uele which by its westward flow he knew was independent of the nile this discovery was his greatest geographical achievement he also did much to elucidate the hydrography of the bahr el ghazal system of greater importance were the very considerable additions he made to the knowledge of the inhabitants and of the flora and fauna of central africa he described in detail the cannibalistic practices of the mangbetu and his discovery of the pygmy akka settled conclusively the question as to the existence of dwarf races in tropical africa wikipedia
