from america s leading immigration economist the wall street journal a refreshingly level headed exploration of the effects of immigration we are a nation of immigrants and we have always been concerned about immigration as early as 1645 the massachusetts bay colony began to prohibit the entry of paupers today however the notion that immigration is universally beneficial has become pervasive to many modern economists immigrants are a trove of much needed workers who can fill predetermined slots along the proverbial assembly line but this view of immigration s impact is overly simplified explains george j borjas a cuban american harvard labor economist immigrants are more than just workers they re people who have lives outside of the factory gates and who may or may not fit the ideal of the country to which they ve come to live and work like the rest of us they re protected by social insurance programs and the choices they make are affected by their social environments in we wanted workers borjas pulls back the curtain of political bluster to show that in the grand scheme immigration has not affected the average american all that much but it has created winners and losers the losers tend to be nonmigrant workers who compete for the same jobs as immigrants and somebody s lower wage is somebody else s higher profit so those who employ immigrants benefit handsomely in the end immigration is mainly just another government redistribution program i am an immigrant writes borjas and yet i do not buy into the notion that immigration is universally beneficial but i still feel that it is a good thing to give some of the poor and huddled masses people who face so many hardships a chance to experience the incredible opportunities that our exceptional country has to offer whether you re a democrat a republican or an independent we wanted workers is essential reading for anyone interested in the issue of immigration in america today recent influential empirical work has emphasized the negative impact immigrants have on the wages of u s born workers arguing that immigration harms less educated american workers in particular and all u s born workers in general because u s and foreign born workers belong to different skill groups that are imperfectly substitutable one needs to articulate a production function that aggregates different types of labor and accounts for complementarity and substitution effects in order to calculate the various effects of immigrant labor on u s born labor we introduce such a production function making the crucial assumption that u s and foreign born workers with similar education and experience levels may nevertheless be imperfectly substitutable and allowing for endogenous capital accumulation this function successfully accounts for the negative impact of the relative skill levels of immigrants on the relative wages of u s workers however contrary to the findings of previous literature overall immigration generates a large positive effect on the average wages of u s born workers we show evidence of this positive effect by estimating the impact of immigration on both average wages and housing values across u s metropolitan areas 1970 2000 we also reproduce this positive effect by simulating the behavior of average wages and housing prices in an open city economy with optimizing u s born agents who respond to an inflow of foreign born workers of the size and composition comparable to the immigration of the 1990s national bureau of economic research web site i examine the determinants of inter state migration of adults within western germany using the german socio economic panel from 1984 2000 i highlight the prevalence and distinctive characteristics of migrants who do not change employers same employer migrants represent one fifth of all migrants higher education and pre move wages than non migrants conditional on age same employer migrants are therefore more skilled than non migrants by contrast although other migrants have higher education than non migrants they do not have higher pre move wages furthermore they have in their ranks disproportionate numbers of the non employed unemployed and recently laid off it therefore seems inappropriate to characterize them as more skilled than non migrants the results for same employer migrants indicate that skilled workers have a low cost migration avenue that has not been considered in the previous literature i also analyze the relation between repeat and return migration and distinguish between short and long distance migration i confirm that long distance migrants are more skilled than short distance migrants as predicted by theory and i show that return migrants are a mix of successes and failures
