the theory of literary worlds has become increasingly important in comparative and world literatures but how are the often contradictory elements of eastern and western literatures to cohere in the new worlds such contact creates drawing on the latest work in philosophical logic and analytic asian philosophy this monograph proposes a new model of literary worlds that is best suited to comparative literature dealing with western and east asian traditions unlike much discussion of world literature anchored in north american traditions featured here is the transnational work of artists philosophers and poets writing in english french japanese and mandarin in the twentieth century rather than imposing sharp borders this book suggests that vague boundaries link eastern and western literary works and traditions and that degrees of distance can better help us to see the multiple dimensions that both distinguish and join together literary worlds east and west as such it enables us to grasp not only how east asian and western writers translate one another s works into their own languages and traditions but also how modern writers east and west modify their own traditions in order to make them fit in the new constellation of literary worlds brought about by the complex flow of literary information across twentieth century eurasia

the definition of value or quality with respect to work in translation has historically been a particularly vexed issue today however the growing demand for translations in such fields as technology and business and the increased scrutiny of translators work by scholars in many disciplines is giving rise to a need for more nuanced more specialized and more explicit methods of determining value some refer to this determination as evaluation others use the term assessment either way the question is one of measurement and judgement which are always unavoidably subjective and frequently rest on criteria that are not overtly expressed this means that devising more complex evaluative practices involves not only quantitative techniques but also an exploration of the attitudes preferences or individual values on which criteria are established intended as an interrogation and a critique that can serve to prompt a more thorough and open consideration of evaluative criteria this special issue of the translator offers examinations of diverse evaluative practices and contains both empirical and hermeneutic work topics addressed include the evaluation of student translations using more up to date and positive methods such as those employed in corpus studies the translation of non standard language translation into the second language terminology the application of theoretical criteria to practice a social textual perspective and the reviewing of literary translations in the press in addition reviews by a number of literary translators discuss specific translations both into and out of english in the current context of globalization relocation of cultures and rampant technologizing of communication orality has gained renewed interest across disciplines in the humanities and the social sciences orality has shed its once negative image as primitive non literate and exotic and has grown into a major area of scientific interest and the focus of interdisciplinary research including translation studies as an important feature of human speech and communication orality has featured prominently in studies related to pre modernist traditions modernist representations of human history and postmodernist expressions of artistry such as in music film and other audiovisual media its wide appeal can be seen in the variety of this volume in which contributors draw from a range of disciplines with orality as the point of intersection with translation studies this book is unique in its exploration of orality and translation from an interdisciplinary perspective and sets the groundwork for collaborative research among scholars across disciplines with an interest in the aesthetics and materiality of orality this book was originally published as a special issue of translation studies this book explores the intersection of metaphor studies and translation studies specifically focusing on popular scientific articles the volume complements existing work on conceptual metaphor theory in translation by aligning it with conceptual blending theory to demonstrate how an integrated approach offers a more expansive understanding of the cognitive and linguistic dimensions of metaphor translation it includes an essential introduction to the key concepts and theories in metaphor studies and metaphor translation research discerning the importance of localising theories from neighbouring disciplines such as metaphor studies for advancing interdisciplinary research in translation studies sui he applies this approach to popular cosmological discourse analysing examples from articles in scientific american and their chinese translations allowing for a nuanced examination of translation strategies adopted by translators at both cognitive and linguistic levels which presents the circulation and transformation of popular cosmological knowledge from english in two chinese mediated communities this book will be of interest to students and scholars in translation studies metaphor studies and discourse analysis
