seminar paper from the year 2021 in the subject american studies literature grade 17 ruhr university of bochum institut für philologie language english abstract this paper analyzes the evolution of t'Challa as the black panther regarding the progression of his mindset by taking a look at different fictional texts that reach from comic books to movies about the character while also referring to secondary literature in order to examine the different conceptions that people receive from these diverse representations of the black panther obviously the black panther can't really be seen as a linear character due to the fact that the different fictional texts are not created or produced by the same person while the black panther was firstly introduced by Stan Lee as a white u.s. american comic author the film from 2018 was produced by Ryan Coogler an african american director which seemingly allows different representations of the character keeping that in mind i'm not going to point out how the character evolves from one storyline to the other but rather take a look at how t'Challa's motivation has changed and how his mindset matured over time over 50 years ago on the 12th of april 1966 in the 52nd edition of the first volume fantastic four comic books the black panther was introduced as the first black superhero in the acquainted american comic book branch this appearance laid the foundation for t'Challa the black panther as a character and Wakanda as a nation with great history and tradition being admired not only by comic book or movie fans but also many other people in today's society the character was created by comic author Stan Lee and illustrator Jack Kirby who aimed to address the lack of black characters in the comic book industry by introducing a strong independent figure who is not part of a group like the fantastic four for instance but rather his own personality although black characters did occasionally appear in comic book history before the introduction of the black panther they were mostly presented in a manner that reproduced and sought to legitimate the legal and political status of african americans as second class citizens with the introduction of the black panther as a comic book character Stan Lee managed to break these old fashioned representations of black characters and thus have an impact on a whole generation of comic book fans and creators seminar paper from the year 2022 in the subject english language and literature studies grade 2.0 university of hannover englisches seminar course films and remakes language english abstract analysis of the depiction of violence in the original halloween movie by John Carpenter as well as its 2007 remake by Rob Zombie analysis of the remake logic John Carpenter's halloween from 1978 is the 17th scariest horror movie of all time at least according to the science of scares study conducted by the website broadbandchoices.co.uk in 2021 the results are based on the average heart rate viewers exhibited during the screening of different horror movies whether this indicator serves as a reliable source for actually determining the fear factor of movies is questionable to say the least likewise scientists and scholars psychologists and philosophers have been arguing for a long time about what induces fear in the viewer while watching horror movies and why one should even want to consume these films at all then theories range from ones that claim we simply feel empathy and sympathy towards the characters in the movie e.g. Plantinga 2009 to ones that propose that the viewing experience itself is the scary feature Hanich 2014 yet others mainly psychological approaches contend that there is a certain level of enjoyment to be had from experiencing fear while knowing there is no actual threat present Nummenmaa 2021 whatever the actual explanation might be perhaps all of them are true to an extent the discussion surrounding the topic itself serves to illustrate one of the key functions of the horror movie to make its viewers feel afraid while there are a multitude of ways to achieve this one only needs to consider the vast array of different genres of horror from gory slasher flicks to supernatural and paranormal horror the ultimate goal can be seen as the evocation of fear
