Italy and the East Roman World in the Medieval Mediterranean addresses the understudied topic of the Italian Peninsula's relationship to the continuation of the Roman Empire in the East across the early and central Middle Ages. The East Roman World, commonly known by the ahistorical term Byzantium, is generally imagined as an Eastern Mediterranean Empire with Italy part of the Medieval West. Across 18 individually authored chapters, an introduction and conclusion, this volume makes a different case for an East Roman World of which Italy forms a crucial part and an Italian Peninsula which is inextricably connected to and indeed includes regions ruled from Constantinople. Celebrating a scholar whose work has led this field over several decades, Thomas S. Brown's chapters focus on the general themes of Empire, cities, and elites and explore these from the angles of sources and historiography, archaeology, social, political, and economic history, and more besides, with contributions from established and early career scholars elucidating particular issues of scholarship as well as general historical developments. The volume provides both immediate contributions and opens space for a new generation of readers and scholars to a growing field.

Core tourist sites for the classical world are the ruins of those many and scattered examples of lost and abandoned towns from Pompeii to Timagad to Ephesus and Petra. Usually studied for their peaks and growth, rarely are their ends explored in detail to consider the processes of loss and also to trace their afterlives when they were often robbed for materials even if still hosting remnant populations. This volume breaks new ground by examining the phenomenon of urban loss and abandonment from Roman to medieval times across the former Roman Empire through a series of case studies. Two main aspects are examined: firstly, the sequences and chronologies of loss of sites, roles, structures, people, identity; and secondly, the methodologies of study of these sites from early discoveries and exploitation of such sites to current archaeological and scientific approaches, notably excavation, urban survey, georadar, and geophysics, to studying these crucial centres and their fates. How can we determine the causes of urban failure, whether economic, military, environmental, political, or even religious? How drawn out was the process of urban decay and abandonment? What were the natures of the afterlives of these sites which archaeology is beginning to trace? How far does scrutiny of these extinct sites help in discussion of archaeological trajectories of sites that persisted? The fourteen core chapters in this collection consider specific examples and case studies of such lost classical cities from across the many Roman provinces in order to address these questions, bringing together an array of archaeological and historical voices to share views on and findings from excavations and surveys of failed towns. This volume offers much to scholars of Roman, late antique, and early medieval and medieval archaeology and history.
