at a time when the world is contemplating the depletion of non renewable natural resources the consumer society is increasingly being called into question this is nowhere more acutely evident than in france where since its beginnings in the nineteenth century the consumer revolution extending market forces into every area of social and private life has been perceived as a challenge to core elements in french culture such as traditional artisan crafts and small businesses serving local communities cultural historians and sociologists have charted the increasing commercialisation of everyday life over the twentieth century but few have paid systematic attention to the crucial testimony provided by the authors of narrative fiction consumer chronicles rectifies this omission by means of close readings of a series of novels selected for their authentic portrayal of consumer behaviour and analysed in relation to their social cultural and historical contexts walker s study offering an imaginative interdisciplinary panorama covering the impact of affluence on french shoppers shopkeepers and society provides telling new insights into the history and characteristics of the consumer mentality this book starts from a first general observation there are very diverse ways to frame and convey scientific knowledge in texts it then analyzes texts on mathematics astronomy medicine and life sciences produced in various parts of the globe and in different time periods and examines the reasons behind the segmentation of texts and the consequences of such textual divisions how can historians and philosophers of science approach this diversity and what is at stake in dealing with it the book addresses these questions adopting a specific approach to do so in order to shed light on the diversity of organizational patterns and rhetorical strategies in scientific texts and to question the rationale behind the choices made to present such texts in one particular way it focuses on the issue of text segmentation offering answers to questions such as what was the meaning of segmenting texts into paragraphs chapters sections and clusters was segmentation used to delimit self contained units or to mark breaks in the physical appearance of a text in order to aid reading and memorizing or to cope with the constraints of the material supports how in these different settings and in different texts were pieces and parts made visible
