chapters on judaism christianity and islam reveal that followers of these religions cannot genuinely perform self sacrificing acts because god has promised to reward every good deed moreover the separation between the self and the other that self sacrifice necessarily implies runs counter to buddhist thought which makes no such distinction by challenging our assumptions about the act of self sacrifice as it relates to religious teachings the authors have shown altruism to be more of a secular than religious notion at the same time their findings highlight how charitable acts operate with the values and structures of the religions studied
