french today is a profile of the french language in its social context british and french linguists examine trends in french throughout the french speaking world and address issues around prescriptivism gender and language and regional languages and dialects the collection includes overviews of work done in particular areas and deeper analyses of sociolinguistic questions one theme is how to represent and interpret data relating to language varieties that have been marginalised another concerns the ways in which french is adapting to the future whether as a language of new technology or as a vehicular language on the continent all chapters of this book are in english with examples and quotations in french and a mixture of references given in both languages at the end of each chapter there are also texts in french serving as illustration and as pointers to further reading in her introduction tymieniecka states the core theme of the present book sharply is culture an excess of nature s prodigious expansiveness an excess which might turn out to be dangerous for nature itself if it goes too far or is culture a natural congenial prolongation of nature life if the latter then culture is assimilated into nature and thus would lose its claim to autonomy its criteria would be superseded by those of nature alone of course nature and culture may both still be seen as being absorbed by the inner powers of specifically human inwardness on which view human being caught in its own transcendence becomes separated radically in kind from the rest of existence and may not touch even the shadow of reality except through its own prism excess therefore or prolongation and on what terms the relationship between culture and nature in its technical phase demands a new elucidation here this is pursued by excavating the root significance of the multiple rationalities of life in contrast to husserl who differentiated living types according to their degree of participation in the world the phenomenology of life disentangles living types from within the onto-poietic web of life itself the human creative act reveals itself as the great divide of the logos of life a divide that does not separate but harmonizes thus dispelling both naturalistic and spiritualistic reductionism how the urban spectator became the archetypal modern viewer and a central subject in late nineteenth century french art gawkers explores how artists and writers in late nineteenth century paris represented the seductions horrors and banalities of street life through the eyes of curious viewers known as badauds in contrast to the singular and aloof bourgeois flâneur badauds were passive collective instinctive and highly impressionable above all they were visual captivated by the sights of everyday life beautifully illustrated and drawing on a wealth of new research gawkers excavates badauds as a subject of deep significance in late nineteenth century french culture as a motif in works of art and as a conflicted model of the modern viewer bridget alsdorf examines the work of painters printmakers and filmmakers who made badauds their artistic subject including félix vallotton pierre bonnard henri de toulouse lautrec honoré daumier edgar degas jean léon gérôme eugène carrière charles angrand and auguste and louise lumière from morally and intellectually empty to sensitive empathetic and humane the gawkers these artists portrayed cut across social categories they invite the viewer s identification even as they appear to threaten social responsibility and the integrity of art delving into the ubiquity of a figure that has largely eluded attention idling on the margins of culture and current events gawkers traces the emergence of social and aesthetic problems that are still with us today
