concepts in film theory is a continuation of dudley andrew s classic the major film theories in writing now about contemporary theory andrew focuses on the key concepts in film study perception representation signification narrative structure adaptation evaluation identification figuration and interpretation beginning with an introductory chapter on the current state of film theory andrew goes on to build an overall view of film presenting his own ideas on each concept and giving a sense of the interdependence of these concepts andrew provides lucid explanations of theories which involve perceptual psychology and structuralism semiotics and psychoanalysis hermeneutics and genre study his clear approach to these often obscure theories enables students to acquire the background they need to enrich their understanding of film and of art for most people film adaptation of literature can be summed up in one sentence the movie wasn't as good as the book this volume undertakes to show the reader that not only is this evaluation not always true but sometimes it is intrinsically unfair movies based on literary works while often billed as adaptations are more correctly termed translations a director and his actors translate the story from the written page into a visual presentation depending on the form of the original text and the chosen method of translation certain inherent difficulties and pitfalls are associated with this change of medium so often our reception of a book based movie has more to do with our expectations and reading of the literature than with the job that the movie production did or did not do avoiding these biases and fairly evaluating any particular literary based film takes an awareness of certain factors written with a formalistic rather than historical approach this work presents a comprehensive guide to literature based films establishing a contextual and theoretical basis to help the reader understand the relationships between such movies and the original texts as well as the reader's own individual responses to these productions to this end it focuses on recognizing and appreciating the inherent difficulties encountered when basing a film on a literary work be it a novel novella play or short story individual chapters deal with the specific issues and difficulties raised by each of these genres providing an overview backed up by case studies of specific film translations films and literary works receiving this treatment include the unbearable lightness of being the manchurian candidate 1962 lady windermere's fan by oscar wilde and shakespeare's henry v interspersed throughout the text are suggestions for activities the film student or buff can use to enhance his or her appreciation and understanding of the films instructors considering this book for use in a course may request an examination copy here

The Routledge Encyclopedia of Film Theory is an international reference work representing the essential ideas and concepts at the centre of film theory from the beginning of the twentieth century to the beginning of the twenty-first. When first encountering film theory students are often confronted with a dense interlocking set of texts full of arcane terminology, inexact formulations, sliding definitions and abstract generalities. The Routledge Encyclopedia of Film Theory challenges these first impressions by aiming to make film theory accessible and open to new readers. Edward Branigan and Warren Buckland have commissioned over 50 scholars from around the globe to address the difficult formulations and propositions in each theory by reducing these difficult formulations to straightforward propositions. The result is a highly accessible volume that clearly defines and analyzes step by step many of the fundamental concepts in film theory, ranging from familiar concepts such as apparatus, gaze, genre and identification to less well known and understood but equally important concepts such as Alain Badiou's in aesthetics, Gilles Deleuze's time image and Jean-Luc Nancy's evidence. The Routledge Encyclopedia of Film Theory is an ideal reference book for undergraduates of film studies as well as graduate students new to the discipline.

chapter by chapter accounts of the background and current approaches to each topic followed by a prognostication on the future considers cinema studies in relation to other forms of knowledge such as critical studies anthropology and literature since the 1970s the academic study of film has been dominated by structuralist marxism varieties of cultural theory and the psychoanalytic ideas of freud and lacan with post theory david bordwell and noel carroll have opened the floor to other voices challenging the prevailing practices of film scholarship addressing topics as diverse as film scores national film industries and audience response post theory offers fresh directions for understanding film this book examines some of the most significant recent developments in film and critical theory the book is divided into four sections each dealing with established and alternative critical concepts and approaches these four are the gaze and subjectivity film and discourse film and culture film and meaning each of these topics is explored using concepts from post structuralism and postmodernism working towards the idea that the relationship between film studies and critical theory is a vital and diverse interplay of rich and exciting ideas with a common focus on the decisions made by filmmakers the essays in this collection explore different aspects of the relationship between textual detail and broader conceptual frameworks these texts reflect not only those areas of film history which have traditionally been explored through mise en scène criticism but also areas such as the avant garde and television drama which have not tended to receive such detailed investigation in these ways the book conducts a series of dialogues with issues in film study which are specifically provoked by close analysis in this book seung hoon jeong introduces the cinematic interface as a contact surface that mediates between image and subject proposing that this mediation be understood not simply as transparent and efficient but rather as asymmetrical ambivalent immanent and multidirectional jeong enlists the new media term interface to bring to film theory a synthetic notion of interfaciality as underlying the multifaceted nature of both the image and subjectivity drawing on a range of films jeong examines cinematic interfaces seen on screen and the spectator's experience of them including the direct appearance of a camera filmstrip screen the character's bodily contact with such a medium interface the object's surface and the subject's face as quasi interface and the image itself each of these case studies serves as a platform for remapping and revamping major concepts in film studies such as suture embodiment illusion signification and indexicality looking to such theories as the ontology of the image and the phenomenology of the body this original theorization of the cinematic interface not only offers a conceptual framework for rethinking and re linking film and media studies but also suggests a general theory of the interface
