students need updated writing genres and a real reason to write evolutions in technology and connectivity have brought about significant changes in the ways writing is produced and shared yet despite monumental shifts in the practice of writing how we teach writing has remained largely static what we need is a new set of genres for writing instruction genres that will speak to students who are already immersed in rich and multifaceted literacy practices through social media gaming and new technologies jessica s early s next generation genres provides an alternative framework for a secondary writing curriculum that places a central emphasis on helping students gain the experience they need to write with confidence in academic and civic life if your students eyes glaze over when they face a standard essay assignment perhaps it s time to let them try writing an infographic or a podcast in a collection of chapters from high school teachers and university researchers raise your voices offers english language arts teachers one stop shopping to learn how to foster dialogic classrooms and how to prompt sustain connect and assess classroom discussions especially discussions about issues that adolescents find consequential the chapters explore both the basics for facilitating discussion to support literacy learning and the principles for assessing the progress and effect of discussion and for including all students in lively dialogue taken together the entries in this book envision the english language arts classroom as a supportive environment for authentic inquiry and for the genuine democratic processes involved in grappling together with tough perennial and contemporary issues the mercenary this is the marvelous saga of the mercenary it's also the tale of Harry S. Nightmarish Misadventures Problematic Press is proud to present to you this gonzo picaresque novel or something is there ever any solace this is it this is lit somewhere between Holden Caulfield, Ignatius J. Reilly, and Bojack Horseman you'll find Harrison Stockton Bueller playing with his G.I. Joe's mercenary. A sells word inspired by a typo is a metafictional hero who's been drafted for lit's sake on land, sea, and air. His mission word in the words of the author: this is a gonzo picaresque novel. It's a work of intermedial metafiction. It's a cautionary tale. It's a sob story. It's a farcical melodrama. It is high art. It adapts a zine of poetry and adventure. It adapts a mememoem, which is literally a new poetic art form that I invented for this. It is the culmination of my life's work in literature. It's ballsy and hubristic and vulnerable. All at once the protagonist is an anti-hero. The sidekick is really something else. The odds are against them, but they're in this to win it together. They make things weird. Well, this thing is certainly weird. David Reynolds hasn't won any awards for his creative writing, but his most shocking anecdote has won him more beer than he could possibly ever drink. He lives in St. John's, Newfoundland and Labrador, where he teaches English at Atlantic Canada's largest university.

This volume was born to address the lack of classroom-oriented scholarship regarding U.S. educated multilingual writers. Unlike prior volumes about U.S. educated multilinguals, this book focuses solely on pedagogy from classroom activities and writing assignments to course curricula and pedagogical support programs outside the immediate classroom. Unlike many pedagogical volumes that are written in the voice of an expert researcher-theorist, this volume is based on the notion of teachers sharing practices with teachers. All of the contributors are teachers who are writing about and reflecting on their own experiences and outcomes and interweaving those experiences and outcomes with current theory and research in the field. The volume thus portrays teachers as active, reflective participants engaged in critical inquiry. Contributors represent community college, college, and university contexts: academic ESL, developmental writing, and first-year composition classes and face-to-face, hybrid, and online contexts. This book was developed primarily to meet the needs of practicing writing teachers in college-level ESL, basic writing, and college composition classrooms, but will also be useful to pre-service teachers in TESOL, composition, and education graduate programs.

This is a unique collection of two of the Inklings and their literary associates' views on the negative impacts of technology in various areas of life and the resolution of these impacts through fellowship with others and faith in the creator. Some of these essays offer suggestions on how ensnarement by social media and surrender to modern technology can be countered by surrender to God. Other essays also demonstrate how the significant literary craft of these authors can enchant readers and invite them into fairylands from which they return empowered and with a keener spiritual vision to tackle universal and present concerns.

With a handy size and a very affordable price, this collection offers a well-balanced selection of classic and contemporary literature: 40 stories, 200 poems, 9 plays. For the introductory literature course, the literature is chronologically arranged by genre and supported by informative and concise editorial matter, including a complete guide to writing about literature at the back of the book. This volume in Bedford/St. Martin's popular series of portable anthologies and guides offers the series trademark combination of high quality and great value.
