india s urbanization differs markedly from that of the more developed regions while urban growth in the more developed regions is slowing down india surbanization is moving with a speedy pace india has been facing a serious problem of the rapid rise of population since the last seven decades the huge size of urban population population has reached nearly 400 million now while until the nineteenth century no developed country had a population of more than 100 million only a few metropolises dominate the remainder of the country so excessively that they prevent other parts from developing causing increasing regional imbalance the rapidly increasing population requires a commensurate increase in the number of jobs in urban areas if this population is not to starve or be reduced to total dependence the expansion in the industrial sector of the economy has lagged far behind the population growth this has resulted in increasing unemployment slums deterioration in urban living crime political tension poverty and similar other problems it appears that India is likely to confront still greater urban problems in future with the hasty rise of population the quality of life in big cities has deteriorated quite significantly
