challenging the longstanding interpretation of the early english public sphere as polite inclusive and egalitarian this book reinterprets key texts by representative male authors from the period addison steele shaftesbury and richardson as reactionary responses to the widely consumed and surprisingly subversive work of women writers such as mary astell delarivier manley and eliza haywood whose political and journalistic texts have up until now received little scholarly consideration by analyzing a wide range of materials produced between the 1690s to the 1750s pollock exposes a literary marketplace characterized less by cool rational discourse and genial consensus than by vehement contestation and struggles for cultural authority particularly in debates concerning the proper extent of women s participation in english public life utilizing innovative methods of research and analysis the book reveals that even at its moment of inception there was an immanent critique of the early liberal public sphere being articulated by women writers who were keenly aware of the hierarchies and techniques of exclusion that contradicted their culture s oft repeated appeals to the principles of equality and universality
