approximately every ten years a new generation of scholars and critics challenges the truth about anglo american new criticism both the theoretical and the historical aspects of the movement are examined from a new perspective but re evaluations usually do not go too far because of the critics disregard for the natural discrepancies and contradictions between the new critics theory and practice as well as in the writings of the previous interpreters it seems to be a rather fruitless and totally uninspiring task to establish the real truth about new criticism or to ask new questions about the discoveries of previous scholarship about the new critics such as their contextualism krieger neo romanticism foster organicism wellek kantianism handy closeness to russian formalism ewa thompson or more recently the influence and the reflection of dogma and politics in the new critics writings graff many have already concluded that the new critics represent a group of individuals who defy any standard and firm definition they share a very similar literary taste but have totally different ideas as to what their task is and how it should be carried out however this simple truth has not made the scholars job much easier on the contrary many have gone in the wrong direction trying to reconcile the contradictions or to find non existent similarities the paradoxical nature of the new criticism does not require classification it requires verification flooded with different interpretations the traditional academic textbooks inherit too many of the legendary misconceptions and conclusions of the past for instance the traditional definition of new criticism is based on the following sometimes twofold concepts critical monism and critical relativism or critical subjectivism and the return to critical aestheticism and neo kantianism critical organicism or interpretative form of structuralism and so on however all these concepts need reevaluation for two main reasons first of all in spite of many consciously formulated concepts such as literature as knowledge the form is the meaning the poetic structure exists as the parts and as the whole the new critical theory has been influenced by the new critics analytical concepts as well i e by concepts such as metaphor symbol irony paradox types of ambiguity etc this practically means that in the case of critical monism for instance we can say that it is indeed true that the new criticism seeks to find and develop a unique method for interpreting literature but to achieve this goal needs to establish a variety of definitions of poem and poetry which will become a main reason for discrepancies and contradictions in their thought secondly traditional criticism usually fails to fully recognize the real nature of new criticism because of its overly serious and presumptuous treatment of everything that the new critics have said about themselves and their theories the unique ness of the new criticism lies in the fact that this was the only modern critical movement which tried to combine and reconcile the two opposing schools of criticism the intrinsic or textual criticism with the extrinsic or interpretative criticism using the two opposing philosophical theories literature as an aesthetic and autonomous object and literature as a supreme knowledge in addition to this somehow the scholars have forgotten that most new critics were creative writers and poets thus the new critical understanding of an interpretation as provocation can have its legitimate value in spite of its basically non academic motivations or conclusions

a timely reconsideration of the history of the profession outside literary studies investigates how midcentury black writers built a critical practice tuned to the struggle against racism and colonialism this striking contribution to black literary studies examines the practices of black writers in the mid twentieth century to revise our understanding of the institutionalization of literary studies in america andy hines uncovers a vibrant history of interpretive resistance to university based new criticism by black writers of the american left these include well known figures such as langston hughes and lorraine hansberry as well as still underappreciated writers like melvin b tolson and doxey wilkerson in their critical practice these and other black writers levied their critique from outside venues behind the closed doors of the senate permanent subcommittee on investigations in the classroom at a communist labor school under fbi surveillance and in a host of journals from these vantages black writers not only called out the racist assumptions of the new criticism but also defined black literary and interpretive practices to support communist and other radical world making efforts in the mid twentieth century hines s book thus offers a number of urgent contributions to literary studies it spotlights a canon of black literary texts that belong to an important era of anti racist struggle and it fills in the pre history of the rise of black studies and of ongoing black dissent against the neoliberal university this book offers a history of literary criticism from plato to the present arguing that this history can best be seen as a dialogue among three traditions the platonic neoplatonic and the humanistic originated by aristotle there are many histories of literary criticism but this is the first to clarify our understanding of the many seemingly incommensurable approaches employed over the centuries by reference to the three traditions making its case by careful analyses of individual critics the book argues for the relevance of the humanistic tradition in the twenty first century and beyond
