new york magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the new york herald tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country with award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating new york as both a place and an idea clothing has been a consistent recorder of history through the years documenting the heights of fashion as it threaded its way through post war society this work traces this intricate history from nylon stockings and stiletto heels to full skirts and slim fitting bodices to baby doll nightwear and textured leisure suits as television transformed american culture in the 1950s critics feared the influence of this newly pervasive mass medium on the nation's literature while many studies have addressed the rhetorical response of artists and intellectuals to mid twentieth century mass culture the relationship between the emergence of this culture and the production of novels has gone largely unexamined in a novel marketplace evan brier illuminates the complex ties between postwar mass culture and the making marketing and reception of american fiction between 1948 when television began its ascendancy and 1959 when random house became a publicly owned corporation the way american novels were produced and distributed changed considerably analyzing a range of mid century novels including paul bowles's the sheltering sky ray bradbury's fahrenheit 451 sloan wilson's the man in the gray flannel suit and grace metalious's peyton place brier reveals the specific strategies used to carve out cultural and economic space for the american novel just as it seemed most under threat during this anxious historical moment the book business underwent an improbable expansion by capitalizing on an economic boom and a rising population of educated consumers and by forming institutional alliances with educators and cold warriors to promote reading as both a cultural and political good a novel marketplace tells how the book trade and the novelists themselves successfully positioned their works as embattled holdouts against an oppressive mass culture even as publishers formed partnerships with mass culture institutions that foreshadowed the multimedia mergers to come in the 1960s as a foil for and a partner to literary institutions mass media corporations assisted in fostering the novel's development as both culture and commodity final days pays tribute to the tenuous and halting process of moving on from one phase of life without being able to progress to the next quite yet in a series of poems and short prose pieces xan nowakowski reminds older readers and warns younger ones that endings are seldom synonymous with relief as she explores her own inner vacancy in the last weeks of her high school career desperate for a change yet oddly dissatisfied every time she gets one nowakowski experiments with a wide slew of styles and topics forever searching for a consistent source of fulfillment if only on the page the fifties marks the moment when a heterosexual homosexual dualism came to dominate u s culture's thinking about masculinity the films of this era record how gender and sexuality did not easily come together in a normative manhood common to american men instead these films demonstrate the widely held perception of a crises of masculinity masked men documents how movies of the fifties represented masculinity as a multiple masquerade hollywood's star system positioned the male actor as a professional performer and as a body intended to solicit the erotic interest of male and female viewers alike drawing on publicity poster art fan magazines and the popular press as a means of following the links between fifties stars their films and the social tensions of the period cohan juxtaposes hollywood's narratives of masculinity against the personae of leading men like cary grant humphrey bogart john wayne charlton heston yul brynner william holden montgomery clift marlon brando and rock hudson masked men focuses on the gender and sexual masquerades that organized their performances of masculinity on and off screen
