left ventricular hypertrophy lvh is usually considered to be a compensatory adjustment of heart muscle to an increased work load lvh develops in the course of valvular or congenital heart disease or when part of the myocardium is damaged by long standing ischemia or infarction in the hypertrophied heart the muscle fibers increase in size not in number the fibers are found to contain a larger number of myofibrils and the cell organelles are larger from epidemiologic studies it is known that even mild lvh is associated with myocardial ischemia ventricular arrhythmias and sudden cardiac death most cases of lvh show focal degenerative tissue changes including cellular atrophy myofibrillar disorganization interstitial fibrosis and loss of intracellular connections myocardial dysfunction develops and unlike the functional adaptive changes found in pure hypertrophy is not reversible by surgical treatment of the valvular heart disease or medical correction of hypertension interstitial fibrosis intracellular changes of muscle cells and loss of contractile tissue lead to poor mechanical function and undoubtedly increase the risk of ischemia arrhythmias or sudden death a well recognized problem in patients with a variety of heart diseases even when successfully treated the patients may remain at risk if the compensatory hypertrophy is not fully reversed epidemiologic studies conducted in the framingham population in the early 1950 s demonstrated lvh according to electrocardiographic criteria in 15 of the population 2 of the population had lvh according to chest x ray criteria
