the study on which marienthal is based was conducted in 1930 in austria at the time of a depression that was worse than anything experienced in the united states but the substantive problem is still very much with us although our focus is now poverty rather than unemployment in austria the institutional response to mass unemployment was the dole unlike the work relief programs of the new deal the dole system left workers destitute and idle the essential finding of this research is that when people are deprived of work there is a breakdown in the personality structure of a group marienthal represents a colossal breakthrough in social research it provides a combination of quantification and interpretive analysis of qualitative material an approach that remains in the forefront of present day research design the work combines statistical data at hand case studies information on historical background of those being studied and questionnaires combined with solicited reports that enhance a sense of daily life without intrusion by investigators the work provides a unique insight into how creative innovations can assist in overcoming collective deprivations

this book unveils an innovative plan to end unemployment and poverty in america through the introduction and implementation of new community structures intentionally designed and constructed to improve and restore viable grass root communities throughout america the plan allows core american values to be operationalized in the process of putting millions of americans to work in a new class of highly valued and important jobs it expands the available sectors of work from two to three while simultaneously enhancing real or participatory democracy it also requires the application of scientific methods of investigation and analysis to continuously refine the plan and improve its effectiveness can communities create meaningful work that is an attractive alternative to employment insurance and welfare a major canadian study of a new innovative program is showing this to be true this report presents 18 month impacts from the community employment innovation project ceip a study of a program designed to encourage the longer term employability of participants while supporting local community development in areas of continuing high unemployment communities were challenged to utilize the social economy as a source of jobs which would provide participants with opportunities for developing skills and
