chronologically and by genre within each period the volume reveals the major influences in the development of modern Japanese literature. The Japanese classics themselves, the example of Chinese poetry and the encounter with Western literature and culture, modern Japanese writers reread the classics of Japanese literature, infused them with contemporary language and refashioned them with an increased emphasis on psychological elements. They also reinterpreted older aesthetic concepts in light of twentieth century mentalities while modern ideas captured the imagination of some Japanese writers. The example of classical Chinese poetry remained important for others. Meiji writers continued to compose poetry in classical Chinese and adhere to a Confucian system of thought. Another factor in shaping modern Japanese literature was the example of foreign works which offered new literary inspiration and opportunities for Japanese readers and writers. M B Kastan cancer is a disease resulting from alterations of cellular genes which cause phenotypic changes in somatic cells. Usually when we think about genetic diseases we think about inheriting one or two abnormal genes from our parents and these gene abnormalities confer the disease phenotype. In contrast, in the majority of cancers no such inherited gene abnormalities can be identified, which does not mean that they do not exist and there is no obvious family history suggesting an inherited disease. The vast majority of genes which are altered in the cancer cells are not transmitted through the germ line but rather become abnormal in somatic cells sometime during the lifetime of the individual. Thus the critical question which arises is how do these genetic changes occur in somatic cells? Epidemiologic data suggest that exposure to environmental carcinogens contributes to the genesis of at least 80% of all human cancers (Doll and Peto 1981). Thus it is natural to suspect that the genetic changes in somatic cells which contribute to the transformed phenotype arise from DNA damage caused by such exposures. Therefore, understanding how cells respond to DNA damaging agents is likely to be an important component of our understanding of the genesis of human tumors.
