although just a decade ago the destruction of a european state and society through war and genocide remains one of the worst global crises of the post cold war era with reverberations still felt today bombardment and sieges of major towns and cities concentration and death camps and the mass slaughter and expulsion of civilians were all characteristics of a type of warfare that

Europe had never dreamed might return the war against Bosnia had a major impact on European and wider global consciousness being as it was then the most reported, debated and analyzed conflict to date but despite the extensive coverage of Bosnia the author contends the conflict and its origins were certainly misunderstood there being a significant gulf between media perspectives and the thrust of academic discourse. This multidisciplinary book is based on extensive research into the TV and newspaper framing of the war during the critical early period of its development. Uniquely the analysis of media is underpinned by an extensive and detailed historical argument about the nature of the wars and the politics of the federation including the use of media in war making strategies in Yugoslavia itself. It will be of interest to scholars of IR and politics, media communication and journalism studies and war and genocide studies. Journalists and the general reader will find the book accessible with valuable insights into reporting war and understanding media representation of conflict. Key issues and questions addressed include the critical use of official sources and propaganda in journalism, how media and policymakers interact to define and frame problems for policy action, what factors limit the accurate reporting of war, what is genocide and how is the genocide convention relevant in practice and how to report genocide when such coverage conflicts with state interests.

Provides information about a wide range of curricular issues affecting elementary and high school education, exploring methodological and conceptual issues, looking at the forces that shape the curriculum, studying the impact of the curriculum on special groups of students and discussing conventional subjects like reading and math.

In the past twenty years the study of urban politics has shifted from a predominant concern with political culture and ethos to a preoccupation with political economy, particularly that of urban development. Urban scholars have come to recognize that cities are shaped by forces beyond their boundaries. From that focus have emerged the views that cities are clearly engaged in economic competition that market processes are shaped by national policy decisions, sometimes intentionally and sometimes inadvertently, and that the costs and benefits of economic growth are unevenly distributed. But what else needs to be said about the policies and politics of urban development to supplement prevailing theories? The politics of urban development argues that the role of local actors in making development decisions merits closer study. Whatever the structural constraints, politics still matters. Collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy; they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population. The impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference.

The authors of this volume argue that urban education is in urgent need of reform and that although there have been plenty of innovative and even promising attempts to improve conditions, most have been doomed. The reason for this, they agree, lies in the failure of our major cities to develop their civic capacity, the ability to build and maintain a broad social and political coalition across all sectors of the urban community in pursuit of a common goal.
