the rule of law is widely seen as the cornerstone of any effective polity and increasingly a vital component of the international political system if the international rule of law were to be strengthened it would greatly contribute to trade security human rights and global cooperation in a range of fields yet in many areas the rule of law seems almost absent in international affairs this book explores the institutions that support the effectiveness of the rule of law domestically it focuses on the extent to which similar institutions already exist at international level and analyses the possibility of their further development the authors speculate on how the international rule of law might be advanced in the future thereby suggesting potential strategies for strengthening the international rule of law adopting an interdisciplinary approach and combining the fields of international relations politics and law this book covers a range institutions including un security council international court of justice human rights machinery regional human rights international criminal court world trade organization international tribunal for the law of the sea un department of peacekeeping operations it will be of strong interest to students and scholars of international relations international organisations global governance international law migration law international peace and security law applied ethics political economy political science and sociology in the late 1930s a number of american women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation s entry into world war ii while their story is fairly well known margaret paton walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that american intervention was absolutely necessary paton walsh recounts how the united states became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of american women who faced it as a necessary evil covering the period between 1935 and 1941 she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women s organizations informal women s networks and even male dominated lobbying groups in the great debate over whether america should enter the war some women favored aid to the allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct u s involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a nazi victory paton walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day elizabeth cutter morrow whose son in law charles lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman supported the revision of the neutrality acts to allow the sale of arms to the allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast soon other women joined this debate esther brunauer of the aaup journalist dorothy thompson and organizations like the league of women voters and national women s trade union league broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate american aid for the allied cause focusing on the conflict in europe paton walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the lend lease program for america s entry into the war but supported it nevertheless by late 1941 the women s division of the fight for freedom committee had been established no longer merely advocating aid to britain to keep american boys out of battle this organization supported direct american involvement in the war as a means of stopping nazi oppression while most historians have focused on women s pacifism paton walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs our war too is a story of american women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace it expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on american public opinion over the build up to the war
