through an international cohort of contributors this book examines the rich and diverse strands of artistic and cultural production from the nineteenth century to the present day that contribute to elastic and ever expanding histories of feminist art the contributions facilitate an understanding of the complex histories of feminist art material and cultural production for both new and inveterate students and scholars while complicating feminist art s canonization by engaging questions and issues of history writing itself an implicit concern throughout the volume is how feminist art history has both addressed and at times been complicit in its own systems of exclusion foregrounding political and social movements and developments in related fields such as critical race studies indigenous studies trans studies disability studies and critical ethnic studies in recent decades this volume looks beyond the canonical lineage of feminist art history toward an expansive view of feminist art's pasts, pitfalls and potentials, the book also goes beyond the traditional visual arts to consider vernacular and material cultures in our increasingly visually oriented world which encompasses the social media and citizen journalism accelerated in the covid era. The book will be of interest to scholars and students working in art history and gender studies.

Using sources from a wide variety of print and digital media, this book discusses the need for ample and healthy portrayals of disability and neurodiversity in the media as the primary way that most people learn about conditions. It contains 13 newly written chapters drawing on representations of disability in popular culture from film, television and print media in both the global north and the global south, including the United States, Canada, India and Kenya. Although disability is often framed using a limited range of stereotypical tropes such as victims, supercrips or suffering patients, this book shows how disability and neurodiversity are making their way into more mainstream media productions and publications with movies, television shows and books featuring prominent and even lead characters with disabilities or neurodiversity. Disability representation in film, tv and print media will be of interest to all scholars and students of disability studies, cultural studies, film studies, gender studies and sociology more broadly.

Tesol Teacher Education in a Transnational World critically examines theories and practices in contemporary TESOL teacher education to shed new light on the intersection of transnationalism and language teacher education. It emphasizes the scholarship of transnational mobility of language teachers and showcases critical research from diverse contexts. The book fills a critical research gap by more fully examining the theory and practice of teacher education in a changing time when national identities and cross-border mobilities continue to figure prominently in scholarly discussions through a diverse set of epistemological, historical and theoretical perspectives along with methodological innovations. Contributors of this volume not only index the dynamism of the scholarship of teacher education but they also offer new forums for lively pedagogical debates featuring contributions from diverse educational and geographical contexts including Europe, Asia, North America and Latin America. The book moves the existing scholarship forward to more fully examine TESOL teacher education in relation to transnationalism. This book will be of great interest to academics, scholars, post-graduate students, teacher educators, policymakers, curriculum specialists, administrators and other stakeholders interested in language teacher education, TESOL and applied linguistics.

This book constitutes a feminist literary analysis of motherhood as presented in selected Indian women's fictions across a diverse range of geographical, linguistic, class and caste contexts situated at the crossroads of motherhood studies and literary studies. This book offers a rigorous examination of the prosody and politics of motherhood in this corpus. In its five thematically focused chapters, the book scrutinises in depth such key concerns as maternal ambivalence, maternal agency and caste, mother-daughter relationships, motherhood and diaspora and non-biological motherhood. It attempts to understand the literary ramifications of these issues in order to identify the ways in which fiction writers reconceive of the notion of motherhood and maternal identities from and against multiple perspectives. Another pressing concern is whether these Indian women writers' visions furnish readers with any different understandings of motherhood as compared to dominant western feminist discourses. Maternal Fictions advances feminist literary criticism in the specific area of Indian women's writing and the overarching areas of motherhood and literature by acting as a launchpad into a complex constellation of ideas concerning motherhood the fictional universe is at once ambivalent diverse contingent grounded in a specific location and yet well placed to converse with discourses emanating from other times and places
