since the 1950s and the advance of urban renewal local governments and urban policy have focused heavily on the central business district however such development has all but ignored the inner city neighborhoods that continue to struggle in the shadows of high rise america this analysis of urban neighborhoods in the united states from 1960 to 1995 presents fifteen essays by scholars of urban planning and development together they show how urban neighborhoods can and must be preserved as economic cultural and political centers the authors of this volume argue that urban education is in urgent need of reform and that although there have been plenty of innovative and even promising attempts to improve conditions most have been doomed the reason for this they agree lies in the failure of our major cities to develop their civic capacity the ability to build and maintain a broad social and political coalition across all sectors of the urban community in pursuit of a common goal
