my friend the fanatic is a portrait of the world s most populous muslim country indonesia and the fourth most populous nation in the world a nation once synonymous with tolerance that now finds itself in the midst of a profound shift toward radical islam the portrait is painted through the travels of a pair of unlikely protagonists sadanand dhume the author is a foreign correspondent a princeton educated indian atheist with a fondness for literary fiction and an interest in economic development his companion herry nurdi is a young islamist who hero worships osama bin laden their travels span mosques and discotheques prison cells and dormitories sacred volcanoes and temple ruins over the past 20 years gender relations and the expression of power and authority between men and women in indonesia have been shaped by the forces of reformasi decentralisation a reassertion of central power and economic transitions these changes have given rise to policy reform an increase in women s political representation and new expressions of diverse gender identities but to what extent has the gender order of the new order where women s role as a mother was the basis of citizenship been challenged or just found new articulations what shape do contemporary contestations to gendered power take the chapters in this volume bring gender to the centre stage and provide reflections on the political economic social and cultural progress and barriers in achieving gender equality and diversity in indonesia this book discusses how metaphors in the short story collection they say i m a monkey are translated into english a metaphor is a figure of speech that compares two things indirectly and is often used in literature to deepen meaning or create a strong impression because of this translating metaphors is not an easy task it involves many considerations including cultural background word choice and the original author s intent the author examines the english translation of the stories to see whether the meaning and nuance of the original metaphors are effectively conveyed in the target language the book also explores various types of metaphors such as everyday metaphors cultural metaphors and uniquely crafted metaphors as well as how translators deal with differences in culture and language to keep the meaning intact in addition the book touches on other challenges in translation such as rendering strong or vulgar language interjections like eh uh loh the tone or rhythm of sentences and the metaphorical nature of story titles overall this book shows that translating literary works especially those rich in metaphor is more than just replacing words from one language to another it requires a deep understanding of the underlying meaning and the cultural context of the original text this is an open access book internationalization is one aspect of becoming qualified in this globalization era especially for higher education levels in this particular era when everyone is locked down due to covid 19 virus the academic activity must still run it is correlated with vision of universitas muhammadiyah surabaya as an international standard university so that it can compete with universities at national or international level during pandemy many obstacles occur then it is also led with many opportunities an extensive overview of female film directors worldwide showing how they are breaking through the celluloid ceiling and succeeding in a still very male dominated industry the book contains exclusive interviews with women film directors explores the impact of digital technology and reaches some surprising conclusions now that kathryn bigelow has made history as the first woman to win an oscar for directing we ask whether this is a new era for women filmmakers this unique international overview highlights emerging women directors and groundbreaking pioneers and provides a one stop guide to the leading film directors of the 21st century and the people who inspired them from the blockbusters of the hollywood studios to emerging voices from saudi arabia pakistan and laos we learn of women making films in traditionally male dominated areas such as action fantasy and horror there are contributions from countries with film industries in every state from nascent to mature and this book demonstrates how economic and technological change is creating new opportunities for women film directors everywhere best book on women directors due to its global overview diane amazon gabrielle kelly and cheryl robson have crafted a watershed work celluloid ceiling is essential reading for anyone who wants to know how women directors are helping reshape filmmaking d a morris amazon this book is an essential resource for anyone tracking the inspiring work being done by women film directors from around the world ucf film the level of public consciousness about the barriers faced by female filmmakers is higher than it has ever been despite this the discussion more often than not centres around north america and to a lesser extent europe australia and new zealand and i am guilty as charged this is perfectly understandable but clearly women do make films outside of these countries and it can be illuminating to consider how their experiences reflect or differ from those with which we are more familiar to this end the arrival of a new book the celluloid ceiling could not be more timely edited by gabrielle kelly and cheryl robson it takes a purposefully global overview of the status quo and in doing so provides some fascinating stories and insights reminding us of what is lost when we limit the discussion to anglophone directors matthew hammett knott indiewire

this book combines the methodologies of history and literary criticism reading colonial and post colonial novels of the indies and indonesia as situated testimonies of the past showing how they can illuminate nationalist narratives and imperial historie two hopeless loves the first one begins in a mood of sophisticated ease at a chic jakarta wine bar where seduction flows like champagne hadrian a bored lonely attorney falls in with a woman with no name no past and many beguiling charms yet this affair soon becomes unimaginably complex as the lady in question reveals herself to be tormented by a man charged with carrying out the sentence of an ancient island curse when hadrian pursues his mysterious lover to a remote beachside village in kalimantan the two forbidden loves collide and tragedy ensues essays on literary criticism in indonesia political changes since the fall of the suharto regime in 1998 have had a significant impact on linguistic and discursive practices in indonesia the language policy of the state has become less restrictive than in the past when indonesian bahasa indonesia was vigorously promoted as one of the symbols of the unity of the country s diverse ethnic groups monolingualism in public space has given way to more fluid and pluralistic language use and regional autonomy legislation enacted in 1999 has encouraged expressions of regional identities and aspirations opening up a space for the promotion and use of regional languages in the media education and the bureaucracy concurrently technological development in particular widespread access to the internet has exposed indonesian society much more directly than before to global flows of information giving rise to changes stemming in part from sources outside indonesia but interpreted and shaped according to local conditions and socio cultural practices the meeting of these two vectors one generated internally and the other coming from exposure to global trends is producing a situation of diversity fluidity and change in language use and discursive practice in contemporary indonesian society while contributors to this volume discuss indonesian language expression at the national level a particular focus of the collection is on regional local and minority languages where problems associated with decentralization find their counterpart in the role that language plays in the workings of regional and national identity politics
