in a feeling of wrongness joseph packer and ethan stoneman confront the rhetorical challenge inherent in the concept of pessimism by analyzing how it is represented in an eclectic range of texts on the fringes of popular culture from adult animated cartoons to speculative fiction packer and stoneman explore how narratives such as true detective rick and morty final fantasy vii lovecraftian weird fiction and the pop ideology of transhumanism are better suited to communicate pessimistic affect to their fans than most carefully argued philosophical treatises and polemics they show how these popular nondiscursive texts successfully circumvent the typical defenses against pessimism identified by peter wessel zapffe as distraction isolation anchoring and sublimation they twist genres upend common tropes and disturb conventional narrative structures in a way that catches their audience off guard resulting in belief without cognition a more rhetorically effective form of pessimism than philosophical pessimism while philosophers and polemicists argue for pessimism in accord with the inherently optimistic structures of expressive thought or rhetoric packer and stoneman show how popular texts are able to communicate their pessimism in ways that are paradoxically freed from the restrictive tools of optimism a feeling of wrongness thus presents uncharted rhetorical possibilities for narrative photographing ambiguity examines photography as a metaphor for technological culture arguing that a relational exploration of the medium can shed light on the dominant ideological tendencies of our time the book advocates for photographic practices that emphasize ambiguity suggesting that this approach fosters more conscientious ecological and creative relationships within the technological ecosystem of contemporary life ted hiebert critiques the notion that images should primarily serve to verify or document the external world he contends that these quantifiable perspectives while rooted in historical trends towards technology and data have become so pervasive that they represent a dominant ideological bias in the twenty first century in response to this data driven consciousness the book presents a series of exercises designed to cultivate an embodied experience with digital living not in opposition to the flood of images but within it ultimately photographing ambiguity encourages readers to understand photographs not as benchmarks of reality but as ambiguous constructions of our present and future imaginaries
