over the past thirty years there has been a dramatic shift in the way the legal system approaches and resolves family disputes traditionally family law dispute resolution was based on an adversary system two parties and their advocates stood before a judge who determined which party was at fault in a divorce and who would be awarded the rights in a custody dispute now many family courts are opting for a problem solving model in which courts attempt to resolve both legal and non legal issues at the same time american families have changed dramatically divorce rates have leveled off and begun to drop while the number of children born and raised outside of marriage has increased sharply fathers are more likely to seek an active role in their children's lives while this enhanced paternal involvement benefits children it also increases the likelihood of disputes between parents as a result the families who seek legal dispute resolution have become more diverse and their legal situations more complex in divorced from reality jane c murphy and jana b singer argue that the current problem solving model fails to address the realities of today's families the authors suggest that while today's dispute resolution regime may represent an improvement over its more adversary predecessor it is built largely around the model of a divorcing nuclear family with lawyers representing all parties a model that fits poorly with the realities of today's disputing families to serve the families it is meant to help the legal system must adapt and reshape itself marriage is a site of political conflict it is a controversial issue in the uk australia and the us where there is a clash of values between neoliberal governments and diverse groups either strongly opposing or supporting marriage in the meantime fewer couples are marrying while other family forms are more widely accepted this book explores this disconnect by examining policy issues such as class divides ethnicity religion same sex marriage gender relations and romantic expectations a top down approach explores different government policy responses to marriage in all three countries there are differences and similarities in how governments react to the changes in family formations but values or conceptions of the desirable play a significant role enhancing stability and commitment as well as personal responsibility are important for policymakers who aim to keep the family intact and thereby lower the burden on the public purse it is difficult for political actors to respond to conflicting and changing values surrounding the diversity in relationships or to translate them into policies there is a strong case to be made for increased policy attention to adult relationships and a much weaker case for marriage rich evidence is drawn from interviews with key stakeholders as well as politicians speeches government departmental reports stakeholders documents and responses to government policies and media articles
