realism is a pervasive term in discussions of contemporary developments in the cultural sphere by drawing on different theories of realism the authors explore how the term may be used as a helpful concept in order to analyse and evaluate current trends in cultural production and in turn how cultural production changes our understanding of what counts as realism the contributions deal with realism in narrative fiction drama and audiovisual media film television news within the context of national traditions examples drawn on in the case studies range from africa britain germany iceland russia turkey to the united states while the authors take their cues from media specific realisms focusing especially on narrative fiction the volume also highlights continuities and intersections between notions of realism in different genres and media with its original essays this collection invigorates the transdisciplinary engagement with forms and socio political functions of realism in contemporary culture extending Edward Said's study of the orientalist tradition in western scholarship Bangura traces the origins of contemporary misunderstandings of African Islam to the discourse of colonial literature. Western critics and writers he observes typically without access to Islam except through the colonialist tradition have perpetuated unfounded politically motivated themes.

The late 1960s witnessed the emergence of African women writers on the African literary space earlier dominated by African men. African women's writings largely focus on deconstructing the patriarchal order, religious prescription and cultural mores in order to tear women's veil of invisibility. The topics covered in the book are comprehensive and include among others the francophone African novel, religious and cultural constructs of African women, the poetic constructs of African women, fictional constructs of subaltern African women, marriage and the subordination of women, physical and sexual exploitation of women, women and polygamy in men's fiction, African women writers and the utilitarian function of their art, female protagonists in fiction by African women, discourse on the oppressors and the oppressed, African feminism, Western feminism.

Challenging the notion that francophone literature generally valorizes a traditional natural mode of being over a scientific modern one, Inter Tech proposes a new understanding of the relationship between France and its former colonies in Africa and the Caribbean by exploring how various postindependence authors depict technology as a mediator between them. By providing the first comprehensive study of the representation of technology in relation to colonialism and postcolonialism in francophone literature, Roxanna Curto shows the extent to which the authors promote modernization and social progress. Curto traces this trend in the wake of decolonization when a series of important francophone African and Caribbean writers began to portray modern technology as a liberating, democratizing force capable of erasing the hierarchies of the old colonial order and promoting economic development. Beginning with the founders of négritude, Aimé Césaire and Léopold Sédar Senghor, and continuing with Frantz Fanon, postindependence novelists such as Ousmane Sembène and contemporary writers such as Édouard Glissant, the author shows how these francophone writers champion the transfer of technology from the metropolis to the former colonies as a means of integrating their cultures into a global community, thus paving the way for modernization and technological development.

This 1976 book provides both a historical survey and a critical analysis of the literature in French from West and Equatorial Africa. Professor Blair begins by discussing the social educational and political influences which led to the formation of the negritude movement and to a flowering of french african creative writing this historical approach is then complemented by a study of the different literary genres she traces the evolution of the first manifestations of literary activity in french by african writers the written folk tale fable and short story from the oral tradition of the indigenous culture and the eventual appearance of the novel with a legendary or historical theme the origins of french african drama are considered for the first time and the work of the minor poets analysed finally professor blair attempts a definition of the french african novel and studies examples from three major periods from the 1930s onwards recent research has revealed that the borrowings in yambo ouologuem s epochal novel le devoir de violence bound to violence are far more extensive than was previously thought accused of plagiarism ouologuem quit the parisian literary world and returned to a definitive silence in mali this book attempts to provide both a complete table of the borrowings in le devoir de violence and a new theory of their meaning miller dispels the myth that the borrowings are minor negligible or criminal he argues that they are artful thresholds openings to a profound reconsideration of african history ouologuem set up this system of borrowings as a way to invite readers down unexpected paths of meaning the borrowings are not mere stunts they are inseparable from ouologuem s radical revision of african history and his rejection of negritude the table of borrowings in part three of this book will serve as a resource for readers and scholars
