a thought provoking combination of practical parenting information and scientific analysis our babies ourselves is the first book to explore why we raise our children the way we do and to suggest that we reconsider our culture s traditional views on parenting new parents are faced with innumerable decisions to make regarding the best way to care for their baby and naturally they often turn for guidance to friends and family members who have already raised children but as scientists are discovering much of the trusted advice that has been passed down through generations needs to be carefully reexamined in this ground breaking book anthropologist meredith small reveals her remarkable findings in the new science of ethnopediatrics professor small joins pediatricians child development researchers and anthropologists across the country who are studying to what extent the way we parent our infants is based on biological needs and to what extent it is based on culture and how sometimes what is culturally dictated may not be what s best for babies should an infant be encouraged to sleep alone is breast feeding better than bottle feeding or is that just a myth of the nineties how much time should pass before a mother picks up her crying infant and how important is it really to a baby s development to talk and sing to him or her these are but a few of the important questions small addresses and the answers not only are surprising but may even change the way we raise our children meredith kercher was tragically murdered in november 2007 in perugia italy since then her murder and the subsequent trial have been a source of constant intrigue and media speculation all around the world with the spotlight famously focusing on the accused amanda knox and raffaele sollecito now meredith s father john speaks out for the first time and tells the world about the beautiful daughter he and his family so tragically lost this book is a celebration of meredith s life it is also a father s story of losing a beloved daughter and the first account of the torment the family have suffered and their ongoing quest for justice in thinking without thinking in the victorian novel vanessa l ryan demonstrates how both the form and the experience of reading novels played an important role in ongoing debates about the nature of consciousness during the victorian era revolutionary developments in science during the mid and late nineteenth century including the discoveries and writings of herbert spencer william carpenter and george henry lewes had a vital impact on fiction writers of the time wilkie collins george eliot george meredith and henry james read contributions in what we now call cognitive science that asked what is the mind these victorian fiction writers took a crucial step asking how we experience our minds how that experience relates to our behavior and questions of responsibility how we can gain control over our mental reflexes and finally how fiction plays a special role in understanding and training our minds victorian fiction writers focus not only on the question of how the mind works but also on how it seems to work and how we ought to make it work ryan shows how the novelistic emphasis on dynamic processes and functions on the activity of the mind rather than its structure or essence can also be seen in some of the most exciting and comprehensive scientific revisions of the understanding of thinking in the victorian period this book studies the way in which the mind in the nineteenth century view is embedded not just in the body but also in behavior in social structures and finally in fiction
