the modern history of iraq is punctuated by a series of successive and radical ruptures coups d etat changes of regime military adventures and foreign invasions whose chronological markers are relatively easy to identify although researchers cannot ignore these ruptures they should also be encouraged to establish links between the moments when the breaks occur and the longue dur r e in order to gain a better understanding of the period combining a variety of different disciplinary and methodological perspectives this collection of essays seeks to establish some new markers which will open fresh perspectives on the history of iraq in the twentieth and twenty first centuries and suggest a narrative that fits into the looting of the iraqi national museum in april of 2003 provoked a world outcry at the loss of artifacts regarded as part of humanity s shared cultural patrimony but though the losses were unprecedented in scale the museum looting was hardly the first time that iraqi heirlooms had been plundered or put to political uses from the beginning of archaeology as a modern science in the nineteenth century europeans excavated and appropriated iraqi antiquities as relics of the birth of western civilization since iraq was created in 1921 the modern state has used archaeology to forge a connection to the ancient civilizations of mesopotamia and or islamic empires and so build a sense of nationhood among iraqis of differing religious traditions and ethnicities this book delves into the ways that archaeology and politics intertwined in iraq during the british mandate and the first years of nationhood before world war ii magnus bernhardsson begins with the work of british archaeologists who conducted extensive excavations in iraq and sent their finds to the museums of europe he then traces how iraqis growing sense of nationhood led them to confront the british over antiquities law and the division of archaeological finds between iraq and foreign excavators he shows how iraq s control over its archaeological patrimony was directly tied to the balance of political power and how it increased as power shifted to the iraqi government finally he examines how iraqi leaders including saddam hussein have used archaeology and history to legitimize the state and its political actions

1 this study deals with the mamliik period in iraqi history 1750 1831 and more particularly with later mamliik times 1802 1831 the year 1831 marks the watershed between an era of local rule and one of restored turkish centralization during the mamliik period the influence of external powers in iraq was not excessive after that year direct turkish rule coincided with growing british influence which increasingly opened the country to the forces of the world market as an object of study the period of local rule is interesting particularly because it formed the background to and in some aspects also the start of the modern history of iraq the literature available on mamliik rule and tribal power is scarce and unsatisfying in various ways the best history of ottoman iraq is still that of longrigg which was written in the 1920 s however although based on an admirable range of sources it provides the reader with little more than a political chronology generally the social and political historian of early modern iraq is confronted with a lack of information of a very basic kind if indeed he can find any 2 relevant information for example there is hardly any information on the mamliik institution only the most scanty evidence exists on the history of the yanissaris of baghdad or on the socio political history of the lower orders of the town again almost nothing is known about the lower orders of the sedentary rural world
